23. (I) Memories of our first history lessons at school tend to run to extremes. (II) The enthusiastic few recalled them as a window opening out onto an endlessly fascinating past illuminated by colourful personalities and full of interesting events. (III) The National Curriculum changed the way that history was taught in schools. (IV) For the vast majority, however, they were characterised by boring sequences of names and dates to be memorised. (V) Therefore, as soon as the course was over, they were conveniently forgotten.

24. (I) The kidnap had clearly been planned meticulously. (II) As I was taking my usual evening stroll with the dog, a rather well-dressed man came up to me asked me to direct him to the local church hall. (III) I was just turning round to point up the road when a wet cloth was pressed over my nose. (IV) In the USA people are mostly kidnapped for ransom rather than any other reasons. (V) That was the last I knew until I came to in the back of a large van of some kind.

4. (I) For more than three years, Anna Freg didn't tell her husband that she had sunk nearly half of their savings into the Shanghai stock market. (II) Everyone seems to be so optimistic about the markets now. (III) While he thought all their money was safely sitting in a bank, the value of the stocks plunged by almost 75%. (IV) But over the past couple of months, the Shanghai market has shown signs of life, and Feng, 56-year-old retiree, has recouped half her loses. (IV) She's quietly hopeful that maybe she'll make it all back before her husband has noticed what has been happening to their savings.

7. (I) One of the few things people can agree on about Britain's class system is that it is always out of date. (II) "The peculiarity of English class distinctions is not that they are unjust –for after all, wealth and poverty exist side by side in almost all countries– but that they are anachronistic," George Orwell wrote back in 1947. (III) More recently, Andrew (now Lord) Adonis, one of the brains behind this week's education white paper, helped write a book arguing much the same. (IV) Old ideas about monocles and stately homes were misleading. (V) An adolescence spent at an expensive school with archaic rules and an absurd dress code was until recently thought to be a handicap for a politician.

10. (I) No country in modern history has moved so swiftly from worldwide adulation to dismissal or even contempt as did Japan, in a process that began more or less as the temple bells were tolling in the new year of 1990. (II) In the 15 years that followed, amid crashing stock-and property markets, mountains of dud debt, scores of corruption scandals, vast government deficits and stagnant economic growth, Japan mutated from being a giver of lessons to a recipient of lectures, all of which offered recipes for its reform and revival. (III) Since then, Japan has suffered a price deflation that has still not come to an end. (IV)Those lectures, although received politely by a newly self-deprecatory Japanese elite, seemed to be ignored. (V) Now, however, the time for lectures is over; Japan is back.

READING PASSAGES

1.–3. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

Many countries in the world are faced with the appalling connected problems of increasing population and a shortage of food. It has been estimated that by the year 2010 the world's population will have risen to about ten thousand million. It therefore seems that more countries could find themselves in this situation in the future. There are a number of possible solutions to the problem, but none of them is easy. Firstly, the governments in such countries could discourage people from having large families. Secondly, the people ought to bring new agricultural machinery, modernise their farming methods and develop more land so as to produce enough food to satisfy the needs of the people. And finally, countries with a food shortage should try to import some of the food they need from other countries by exporting their oil, wood, iron or whatever they have. All of these possible solutions (and there are of course many more) simplify the problem. However, they show that, if people mean to solve the problems of increasing population and food shortages, there are means of doing so.

1. The passage, is mainly concerned with _____.

A) the problems of many countries in the world related to the multiplying population and shortage of food as well as several solutions
B) the connection between the problems of increasing population and shortage of food
C) the adverse effects of the decreasing number of people in the world because of the shortage of food
D) a possible way to handle with the rapid rise in the world population and inadequate food supply for the people in many countries
E) the easy solutions to meet the needs of the people living in most of the countries in the world

2. We may infer from the passage that _____.

A) one of the problems in countries which cannot produce enough food for their own people is that farming methods are very simple and often inefficient
B) the possible solutions to the problems of increasing population and shortage of food in the world should not be restricted to the ones mentioned in the passage
C) people need to find some alternative solutions which should be much more effective than the ones they have now
D) having six or seven children is more common than being the parents of one or two in our world today
E) the governments of the populous countries should have the biggest responsibility to cope with the problem of lack of food supply for their people

3. As included in the passage, mentioning the problems of increasing world population and a shortage of food as well as several solutions, the writer tries to warn us _____.

A) because he's too desperate for the future
B) although he doesn't care about any of the problems he mentioned beforehand
C) against thinking that it will be easy to solve the problems of increasing world population and a shortage of food in the world
D) since he himself lives in a poor and populated country
E) against the governments who do not want to take measures in order to solve the problem of poverty in underdeveloped countries

Oscar Niemeyer was a Brazilian architect and the greatest South American exponent of modern architecture. He was fortunate to work in a country relatively unhampered by traditional forms and wealthy enough to finance large projects. Shortly after graduating, he joined the team of designers of the new Ministry of Education and Health building in Rio de Janerio. Le Corbusier went over to Brazil for a time in 1936 to work on the same project, and Niemeyer was very much influenced by the established master. Over the next few years his own idiom developed rapidly: the debt to Corbusier remained, but was modified increasingly by Niemeyer's own fertile and lyrical imagination. Curved forms, curves cut by verticals or horizontals, and the expressive power of low, long and uniform facades became the hallmarks of his style. He has been associated with four great schemes in Brazil. The first of them was a group of buildings near the airport in Belo Horizonte in the early 1940's, and there he displayed that wide variety of structures that was already to be his speciality. His greatest opportunity came with the decision to found a new capital at Brazilia, and between 1950 and 1960 Niemeyer was engaged on the design of the public buildings. One of these included the President's Palace with its elegant curving concrete forms supporting the overhang of the roof and the daring design for the cathedral.

4. According to the passage, Niemeyer was lucky in where he worked because _____.

A) Brazil had little traditional architecture
B) there were few architects around to compete with him
C) he was able to receive the best training
D) Brazil had a long architectural tradition
E) he worked in Rio de Janeiro

5. As is mentioned in the passage, Le Corbusier was _____.

A) the architect who designed Brasilia
B) the best-known Brazilian architect
C) the founder of South American modern architecture
D) affected by Niemeyer very much
E) the architect who initially influenced Niemeyer

6. As concluded in the passage, Niemeyer _____.

A) was not appreciated in his native country
B) was mainly involved in public housing projects
C) worked for the Brazilian government extensively
D) has greatly influenced world architecture
E) was quite conventional in terms of style

10.–12. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

Hilaria Supa wears the ancestral clothing and round hat typical of peasant women from her village near Cusco, the former Inca capital in Peru. She also speaks Quechua, the language of the Inca Empire, which is still used widely in Peruvian Andes. She claims that she has no real need for Spanish because her neighbours all speak Quechua. But that doesn't go for other members of Peru's Congress, to which Ms Supa has just been elected. Along with a colleague, Ms Supa, who speaks fluent Spanish, has insisted on speaking to the legislature in her first language. This, she says, will increase respect for Andean Indian culture and help the language to survive. It has forced the Congress to hire translators. Although Quechua has long been in slow decline, chiefly because the children of migrants to the cities rarely speak it, it is now getting a lot more attention, as a result of Ms Supa's struggles.

10. It is implied in the passage that Hilaria Supa _____.

A) knows only a little Spanish
B) is about to lose her position in the congress since she speaks Quechua
C) is a volunteer supporter of a traditional language called Quechua which is now on the brink of extinction
D) has to learn Spanish to survive in Peruvian Andes
E) is thought to be a racist because of her insistence on speaking to the members of the Congress in Quechua

11. We can understand from the passage that in some parts of Peru _____.

A) there is no need to recognize and overcome its ethnic inequalities
B) people who speak Quechua are looked down on by other people who speak Spanish
C) Ms Supa has a lot of fans that are ready to act as she wants them to do
D) it is enough to know just Quechua to communicate with the people around rather than Spanish
E) there are people who have asserted that the results of the recent election don't show the reality

12. It is clear in the passage that the main reason why Quechua, the language of the Inca Empire, has long been in slow decline is that _____.

A) it is forbidden to speak Quechua in the parliament of Peru
B) the cost of hiring a translator is very high in Cusco
C) the new generation among local people growing up in the cities hardly ever speak Quechua
D) Quechua isn't taught in the schools in Peru
E) the usage of Quechua is now limited to the highland areas where it is predominant by law

Do you sudoku? Even if you don't have any chance to do, you absolutely know somebody who does. Once little-known outside Japan, this addictive brainteaser has become a staple of newspaper puzzle pages the world over. Sudoku's dazzling success owes much to its simplicity requiring neither mathematical ability nor general knowledge and with just a sentence or two of instructions-the puzzle is absurdly easy to learn yet hard to master. "All you need is the ability to recognise the difference between nine different symbols that don't even have to be numeric." explains Michael Mepham, a veteran puzzler and sudoku compiler. Some clever marketing has helped. Western newspapers were quick to identify sudoku as a circulation, booster and worked hard at promoting the puzzle. "Without this, " says Mr Mepham, "it would not have taken off."

13. We may infer from the passage that thanks to Sudoku, _____.

A) the circulation amounts of Western newspapers increased
B) the aid of the witty marketing was seen
C) people learnt how to overcome the difficulties of a puzzle
D) people began to work harder to improve the puzzles available on the market
E) puzzles became available online

14. As is stated in the passage, Sudoku's achievement mostly results from _____.

A) the sophistication and intricateness of words
B) the proportion of its profits compared to its counterparts
C) the desire of people who want to improve their skills while coping with it
D) a great mathematical ability and general knowledge
E) its lack of complexity

15. As concluded in the passage, Sudoku took off because _____.

A) of its complexity
B) people finally found a suitable field to improve their skills
C) most of the people know and like Sudoku
D) Some clever marketing blocked the sales of other puzzles
E) Western newspapers worked hard at promoting the puzzle since they saw it as a circulation booster

Photography often blurs the distinction between art and reality. Modern technology has made that blurring easier. In the digital darkroom photographers can manipulate images and threaten the integrity of endeavours that rely on them. Several journalists have been fired for such activity in recent months, including one from Reuters for faking pictures in Lebanon. Earlier this year, the investigation into Hwang Woosuk showed the South Korean scientist had changed images purporting to show cloning. In an effort to real in photography, camera-makers are making it more obvious when images have been altered by using several coding systems.

16. The passage mainly explains that _____.

A) the real photographs taken by the photographers can be distinguished from the fake ones with the help of technology
B) alteration or manipulation on a photograph will certainly cause a journalist to be dismissed from his position
C) it is difficult to notice a fault on a photo in the modern world because of the lack of necessary technological techniques
D) it isn't ethically wrong to fake pictures so as to make people believe something unreal in the press
E) camera-makers and manufacturers haven't found a method to blur a real photo from its imitation yet

17. One point made in the passage that _____.

A) digital images have natural statistical patterns in the intensity and texture of their pixels
B) photoshop was the program used by the journalists fired by Reuters
C) sometimes the best scrutiny is a simple gaze at the photos to see the manipulations on them
D) one way of blurring the distinction between the real photos and the unreal ones is to use image-authentication systems to reveal if someone has tampered with a picture
E) even scientists have recoursed to faking photos in order to deceive the scientific world

18. It can be inferred from the passage that _____.

A) there are more than one way to make it clear that a photo is not real but a fake one today
B) up to now only one journalist has lost his job because of faking photos
C) analyzing the shadows and lighting to see if subjects and surroundings are consistent is a more successful way than image-authentication system
D) internet has been proven as an effective check on digital forgery
E) digital forgery or digital alterations on a photo can be done in any environment

Oscar Wilde was born in Dublin in 1854, to parents who were both prominent citizens. In her youth, Wilde's mother had achieved a transatlantic reputation as the author of inspiring nationalistic poetry, published under the name of "Speranza". Wilde's father, William, knighted by the British queen in 1864, was a medical specialist in complaints of the eye, who, although a staunch Protestant, showed his nationalism in collecting and preparing for print tales of Irish folklore. Oscar Wilde attended public school at Portora Royal School and gained undergraduate degrees in classic at Dublin's Trinity College and Oxford's Magdalen College. As a student, he showed promise not simply as a linguist, but as a witty exponent of the ideas and philosophy of life which he found in the writings of the ancients. One day, at the university, when challenged about his ambitions in life, Wilde replied prophetically: "I'll be a poet, a writer, a dramatist, somehow or other. I'll be famous, and if not famous, I'll be notorious." When I read about Oscar Wilde's life in detail, you will notice that he achieved all his ambitions about which he had dreamed in his university years successfully.

19. It is stated in the passage that Oscar Wilde was the son of parents _____.

A) that were successful opticians and at the same time religious people
B) who got undergraduate degrees in classics in Dublin's Trinity College and Oxford's Magdalen College
C) who displayed their love towards their nation through their literal works
D) from whom Oscar Wilde definitely took his inspirations and ability in writing
E) who were the initial and the most fervent exponents of the nationalistic literature in Ireland

20. From information given in the passage, we can infer that Oscar Wilde _____.

A) used a new style of his own that made the spirit of ancient Grek and the Hellenic Age come together in his works
B) always gave prophetic answers to the people who asked him questions about his character
C) seemed to be determined to be recognized and known by people throughout the world one day when he was at the university
D) had a family which was not very important for the British Royal Family
E) was not a hardworking and successful student when he was in the public school

21. One may conclude from the passage that Oscar Wilde _____.

A) could become famous only for his critics he wrote during his academic career
B) gained a bad fame in the world of literature
C) wasn't able to make his dreams about life come true
D) was never interested in philosophy and ancient writings
E) wrote different works in almost all the genres of literature

Although most things in Darie'n are cheap, travel is not. One needs substantial amounts of time or money, preferably both. For two reasons: it is not easy to get around, and it is not safe. It is not easy because, south of Yaviza, there are no roads. It is unsafe because of the Colombian civil war. Neither the Panamanian nor do the Colombian governments have control over the border, so guerrillas, paramilitaries and bandits freely cross back and forth. Despite their lack of control over the border area, Panama's police force is reasonably professional and not particularly corrupt. Unfortunately, for most visitors this only makes travel more difficult, as the police periodically close regions of Darie'n to foreigners. Knowing they have no control over certain regions, they'd rather foreign travellers did not go at all to avoid the chance of kidnappings.

22. It may be understood from the passage that _____.

A) Darie'n can be insecure for foreigners because of the political unrest in the region
B) Colombia and Panama are at war because of a regional problem
C) governments of both Panama and Colombia have strict control over the border, so people can wander around freely
D) Darie'n is one of the cheapest places in the world in terms of accommodation and travel
E) it's really difficult to travel in Darie'n since there are few roads

23. According to the passage _____.

A) Colombian civil war led to a governmental charge in Panama
B) guerillas, paramilitaries and bandits have taken over the administrative power in the country
C) Yaviza is a safer place to visit than Darie'n
D) the officers in the Panama Police Center have to complete a hard training program before assigned at the borders
E) Panama Police Force's being Professional does not make travelling easier for most of the foreigners

24. As it is suggested in the passage, visitors wanting to travel in Darie'n need time and money because _____.

A) everything is very expensive and there lies a huge country under their feet
B) the bureaucracy is too slow and they always have to bribe to the policemen at the border
C) they will be in need of hiring bodyguards who will be in charge of shielding them against kidnappers
D) it is troublesome and risky to wander around on account of the lack of roads and the civil war in Colombia
E) if they are kidnapped, the only way to survive is to accept paying a huge amount of ransom to the gangsters who have kidnapped them

The technology of the North American Colonies did not differ strikingly from that of Europe, but in one respect, the colonists enjoyed a great advantage. Especially by comparison with Britain, Americans had a wonderfully plentiful supply of wood. The first colonists didn't, as many people imagine, find an entire continent covered by a climax forest. Even along the Atlantic seaboard, the forest was broken at many points. Nevertheless, all sorts of fine trees abounded, and through the early colonial period, those who pushed westward encountered new forests. By the end of the colonial era, the price of wood had risen slightly in eastern cities, but wood was still extremely abundant and it was a foundation of the economy. Houses and all manner of buildings were made of wood to a degree unknown in Britain. Secondly, wood was used as a fuel for heating and cooking. Thirdly, it was used as the source of important industrial compounds, such as potash, an industrial alkali; charcoal, a component of gunpowder; and tannic acid.

1. The passage mainly discusses _____.

A) the negative effects of an abundance of wood on the colonies
B) the roots of the Industrial Revolution
C) the difference between charcoal and tannic value
D) why the wood had little or no economic value
E) the advantages of using wood in the colonies

2. As is stated in the passage, by the end of the Colonial period, the price of wood in eastern cities _____.

A) decreased rapidly owing to lower demand
B) was slightly higher than in previous years
C) was very much higher than it was in Britain
D) rose quickly since wood was becoming scarce
E) was protested by the public

3. It's implied in the passage that, houses in Britain during the period mentioned in the passage were _____.

A) usually built from materials other than wood
B) typically smaller than homes in North America
C) generally built with imported materials
D) more expensive than American houses
E) all made of wood

When they first appeared a few years ago, smart phones were marketed as the Swiss Army knife of personal communications, combining the versatility of a hand-held computer with the connectivity of a mobile phone. What set them apart from standard mobile phones was their ability to download and run a broad range of third-party software applications. In theory, this meant users did not have to settle for the software applications that came with the device. In practice, however, the novelty value of having a currency converter, weather services, various different city maps and pocket sudoku crammed onto your phone soon wore off. Similarly, the logistics of viewing Excel spreadsheets or editing Word documents on such device was only for die-hard enthusiasts. In short, until now smart phones have amounted to not much more than executive toys, doing little to improve anyone's productivity.

4. It is stated in the passage that one of the features that makes smart phones different from the standard mobile phones was that _____.

A) smart phones were being retailed as a typical and ordinary device for personal communications in a different way
B) smart phones were capable of operating a wider range of software practices than a standard mobile phone
C) standard mobile phones lacked the ability of finding websites without having to download the necessary programmes via internet
D) standard mobile phones brought together many applications of a hand-held computer with the connectivity of a handy
E) smart phones were produced as a sharp gun to be used in the Swiss Army

5. One may infer from the passage that smart phones seemed to _____.

A) be an invention designed by a Swiss mechanician to make the Swiss public astonished
B) have few things that couldn't be done with them
C) be produced for the people who likes solving puzzles in the digital environment
D) be a device in which nobody showed any interest because of its market price
E) prove useless in practice contrary to expectations in theory

6. It can be inferred from the passage that certain features of smart phones _____.

A) allowed the users to exploit only a little of the hardware of a hand-held computer
B) were not explained theoretically enough to understand how to function
C) didn't appeal to everybody
D) helped the users enchance their productivity
E) were in no need of updating in a short time

Combine current ideas about childhood development and interactive learning with a dwindling number of safe street corners and what you get? A global boom in children's museums. Museums designed to encourage parents to learn from each other, and children to teach themselves, are booming around the world. From Boston to Los Angeles and Shanghai to Dubai, museums for children are breaking ground, expanding, and hiring world-class architects to design eco-friendly landmarks. The kudos from professional educators promises welcome enrichment to cash-strapped public schools and to hopeful parents of Harvard-bound toddlers.

7. The passage is mainly concerned with _____.

A) the professional educators' thoughts and attitudes towards the children's museums
B) how the children's museums are being constructed by famous and proficient architects
C) where the children's museums are being built
D) the rapid increase in the number of the children's museums worldwide
E) how safe the museums in the world are for both children and their parents

8. It is implied in the passage that the children's museums _____.

A) are becoming old-fashioned despite the fact that their numbers are increasing throughout the world
B) don't help the children and their parents learn anything
C) didn't satisfy the demanding parents at all
D) are being designed in the way that they will give no damage to the nature by the masterly architects
E) have only been constructed in downtowns

9. It may be inferred from the passage that the children's museums _____.

A) are being planned on the basis of the modern approaches about childhood development and interactive learning
B) were being built in the corners of insecure streets
C) limit the communication between the parents and their children
D) function as a place to have fun rather than learn for the children
E) are making great contributions to tourism in the cities where they are built

Australia, cut off long ago from other continents, is one of the last places on Earth where one would expect to catch rabies or a related disease transmitted by animals. Yet this prospect is not as far-fetched as it may sound. In the last four years, new diseases carried by animals but affecting human beings have appeared for the first time in Australia and in all these cases bats were involved. Fruit bats are the main cause for concern. They congregate together in large colonies and are found in some of the most heavily populated areas of the continent. Bats are capable of flying up to 200 kilometres in a single journey and often share a convival roost with other species of bats on their way so it is only too easy for them to spread a disease. The danger is accentuated because people are convinced of their harmlessness and many find them cuddly and in need of protection.

10. According to the passage, in Australia, _____.

A) one can have the most secure and comfortable vacation
B) the most deadly virus has been identified in the last four years
C) there's the possibility of catching a disease transmitted by animals
D) bats are the only threat to human health
E) bats have been poisoned by human-beings in order to wipe out a disease

11. It may be inferred from the passage that _____.

A) the possible danger coming from bats is always taken seriously by people
B) people are scared of bats since they regard them as evil animals
C) bats spread disease easily because they seem to mate with each other on their way
D) fruit bats can only be a minor reason for spreading diseae
E) Australia is too close to the other continents in terms of location and this leads to the rapid spread of a disease

12. It's concluded in the passage that one of the reasons why it's "only too easy" for bats to spread disease to human beings is that _____.

A) bats cannot travel long distances
B) it's not really satisfying to get vaccinated against bat virus
C) bats aren't able to find areas to setle where many people live
D) human-beings carry some hazardous disease as well
E) people are not afraid of them because they suppose that they're benign

Although the weathermen's forecasts for a month ahead are only a little better than guesswork, they are now making long-term forecasts into the next century with growing confidence. For the dominant trend in the world's climate in the coming decades will, scientists say, be a predictable result of man's activities. At the start of the industrial revolution nearly two centuries ago, man innocently set off a gigantic experiment in planetary engineering. Unaware of what he was doing, he spared no thought for the consequences. Today the possible outcome is alarmingly clear, but the experiment is unstoppable. Within the lifetimes of many us, the Earth may become warmer than it has been for a thousand years. Superficially, a warmer climate may seem welcome. But it could bring many hazards-disruptions of crops in the world's main food-producing regions, famine, economic instability, civil unrest and even war.

13. We learn from the passage that long-term weather forecasts beyond a century from now may seem strange because _____.

A) as a fact that changes in the climate throughout the world is unpredictable
B) none of us will be alive then
C) weathermen cannot even forecast next month's weather accurately
D) we cannot know what the consequences of our present activities will be in the future
E) it is difficult to foresee how much melting of the great ice-caps of Greenland and Antartica will raise sea-levels throughout the world

14. As it is stated in the passage, weathermen believe that our future climate will be the direct result of _____.

A) the industrial revolution
B) clever long-term forecasts
C) carbon dioxide that has been pouring out of the world's chimneys in ever-increasing quantities
D) unconscious farming
E) scientific experiments

15. One may infer from the passage that a warmer climate _____.

A) is like a concept that most of us have no idea about
B) means that weathermen will be more confident in the coming decades than they are now
C) is the unevitable outcome of carbon dioxide emissions and greenhouse effect
D) may lead to an increase in food production worldwide
E) may cause even war in the long term

It is an interesting paradox that the most enduring of the legendary stars of Hollywood's golden era should be one who in many ways bucked the trend. To begin with, there is the simple matter of his name. While the image makers at the big studios racked their brains to invent names that would reflect the screen personality of stars who had been cursed from birth with others that were dull, unpronounceable or simply not Anglo-Saxon enough for the American public, he kept his own, one that was unique for a film star of his day because of the combination of a Christian name with upper-class associates and a surname that sounded Dutch or German. A generation of boys in Britain and the United States were registered with the invented names assigned to the leading actors their star-struck mothers adored- Wayne or Gary or Kirk - without ever being aware of stars' real names. Yet hardly any of the admirers of Humphrey Bogart saw fit to follow suit.

16. We learn from the passage that Humphrey Bogart's screen name was unusual in the great days of Hollywood because _____.

A) Humphrey is a lower-class name
B) it was his own name
C) Bogart sounds like a muslim name
D) it didn't appeal to American public
E) he'd always played gangster roles in his movies

17. We understand from the passage that considering his name, Humphrey Bogart _____.

A) didn't go after the general tendency which most of the other stars followed
B) seemed to be too childish
C) wasn't able to reflect the power of his name
D) thought it was inappropriate to maintain his own name
E) could hardly continue his career

18. It's understood from the passage that _____.

A) stars in the USA except Humphrey Bogart were all born with names that didn't attract film fans.
B) the name Bogart is so interesting that it can keep people's interest in every country
C) Christian names take off much better than the others in any foreign film industry
D) the image makers of big studios were trying very hard to think of suitable names for stars
E) male stars are luckier than their female counterparts in the film industry

Most great singing stars have established themselves long before they get to 35, but that is how old Madge Sharp is now, and this is her first record, it will not be her last. "I've always wanted to be a blues singer, " she says. "I used to listen to singers like Mahalia Jackson and Ella Fitzgerald and others on record, but my parents would never let me go to a concert. And they never allowed me to sing with a band. The only singing I did for years was in our church choir. Of course I wish I had started in the profession earlier, but I've got something now which a lot of younger singers haven't got-experience and maturity." "And it's this experience and maturity in her voice which adds a distinct originality to all the tracks on this collection. All the songs may be old, but her versions of classics like "Ifé" and "Georgia" make them sound as if they were written yesterday.

19. It is clearly stated in the passage that Madge Sharp _____.

A) made her first record later in her life than most singers
B) wanted to wait till she was experienced before making a record
C) used to be the soloist of a small band years ago
D) was never allowed to listen to the other singers except Mahalia Jackson
E) will no longer make an album

20. It is understood from the passage that Madge Sharp _____.

A) was always supported by her family to become a blues singer
B) started her singing career by imitating the singers like Ella Fitzgerald
C) probably gained most of her experience by singing in a church choir for a long time
D) liked going to her favourite singers'concerts in her youth
E) cannot sing as original as the younger singers can

21. It can be concluded from the passage that _____.

A) Madge Sharp never dreamed about being a singer when she was a child
B) most of the great singing stars appreciated her way of singing
C) the music market had been in need of such a record for ages
D) Madge Sharp's first record doesn't include even one new song
E) all the younger singers want to sing as Madge Sharp does

One afternoon last spring, eight women found themselves at a resort in Texas stretched out on the floor on mats, each with a series of acupuncture needles protruding from their bodies. The atmosphere was calming and happy as an acupuncturist quietly moved from woman to woman, twisting and turning the needles, recalls Heidi Schell, one of those women who were nearing the end of a week-long retreat, all working towards the same goal - to get pregnant, The journey that led Ms. Schell to the group acupuncture session will sound familiar to many women: she was among the 36% of females in the United States who had been seeking medical assistance to have a baby. To do so, she was among the 1% of women trying high-tech treatments - in her case, in vitro fertilization (IVF). But, at 40 years of age, her chances of conceiving via IVF were a decidedly slim 10%.

22. As is mentioned in the passage, acupuncture _____.

A) is a treatment process of at least one week
B) has come out as a branch of medicine first in the United States
C) is a curative aid received by some of the women in the USA to have a baby
D) is regarded as an exhausting journey to cure most of the diseases by professional acupuncturists
E) is only performed in group sessions to diagnose the reason why the women cannot get pregnant

23. We understand from the passage that _____.

A) Heidi Schell managed to get pregnant by means of the group acupuncture sessions she participated in
B) acupuncture wasn't a popular method to have a baby among the women in the USA
C) medical assistance could only be given to the women trying to get pregnant
D) acupuncture treatment is merely utilized by the experts for the women at their forties
E) in the USA, 64% of females have the ability to get pregnant without having any treatment

24. It is implied in the passage that _____.

A) most of the women who had been pursuing the ways to be able to get pregnant tried high-tech treatments
B) the prospect of Heidi Schell's having a baby through IVF was almost impossible
C) the possibility of heidi Schell's becoming pregnant was obviously higher than 10%
D) the majority of the women living in the USA needed a medical assistance to get pregnant
E) the atmosphere of all the acupuncture sessions in the USA is disturbing and raging

The best performing oil investment comes from trees in Malaysia, not the deserts of Saudi Arabia, vegetable oils from palm trees are being used in products like Hellmann's mayonnaise and snickers chocolate bars. After petroleum prices doubled in the past three years and governments encouraged renewable fuels, the use of palm oil started to grow. Right now, it is the cheapest and most efficient of vegetable oils. Palm oil, however, is not without its detractors. The growing use of palm oil as fuel may threaten virgin rain forests in Southeast Asia and quicken deforestation, raising the likelihood of legal challenges from environmentalists, say some investors. The biggest challenge to palm oil is sustainability. In other words, biodiesel aims to be environmentally friendly. Nonetheless, this would not be the case if the feedstock were only grown at the expense of virgin rainforest.

1. It is stated in the passage that vegetable oils from palm trees _____.

A) are currently being utilized in marketing articles of some famous companies
B) are rarely produced in Southeast Asia
C) are used just for trucks and cars as fuel
D) cost a lot more in Europa than in Saudi Arabia
E) don't perform well when compared with other alternative vegetable oils used at present

2. As it is emphasized in the passage. Why the use of palm oil is increasing the reason is that _____.

A) other vegetable oils quicken deforestation
B) it is the most economical, efficacious and sustainable one of all the vegetable oils
C) the best performing oil comes from Malaysia
D) it gives no harm to the virgin forests in Southeast Asia
E) its price lowered sharply in the past three years

3. One may infer from the passage that _____.

A) Saudi Arabia surpasses Malaysia in producing efficient palm oil
B) palm oil has no subtractors as to the environmental issues
C) governments and inverstors have ignored the legal challenges of some environmentalists
D) biodiesel is a term much more different from palm oil
E) no matter how much palm oil seems to be ecofriendly, it may be a strong cause of the end of virgin rain forests

One of the world's best-known waterfalls is Niagara Falls, on the border between Canada and the United States. Tourism was practically invented there. But the astonishing thing about Niagara's fame is how overrated it is. Niagara is no where near the biggest waterfall in the world. Nor is it even the longest waterfall in the United States. What is it that makes a waterfall the best? It isn't height. There are many immensely long waterfalls, some cascading thousands of feet such as Strupenfossen in Norway or Mutarazi Falls in Zimbabwe. Of course, when people go to see a waterfall they expect to see a serious amount of water. And Niagara's one claim to fame is that it is the biggest waterfall in North America in terms of volume.

5. As is mentioned in the passage, _____.

A) Niagara is far superior to its counterparts in terms of its width
B) Niagara adds much to the preservation of wild life
C) Niagara Falls is the most spectacular waterfall for most of the people
D) tourists appreciate Niagara because the landscape is excellent
E) Niagara's size is somehow overestimated

4. According to the passage, what makes Niagara the biggest waterfall in North America is that _____.

A) it is the longest waterfall in the region
B) tourism reflects it as the greatest waterfall
C) it is the most attractive of all the waterfalls
D) it has much more capacity of water than any other fall in North America
E) it has a height non-comparable to any other waterfall

6. As concluded in the passage _____.

A) Niagara is too far to visit because it is on the border
B) it's difficult to find any longer waterfalls than Niagara in the world
C) Mutarazi Falls is thought to be the biggest waterfall in terms of volume
D) tourism was invented in Northern America
E) people hope to see a great quantity of water when they go to a waterfall

Stress has become a scourge afflicting not only busy executives, but also teenagers. What makes it such a common conversation piece these days is the fact that it's not a proper disease but a silent debilitator that takes its toll on the body over years or decades. Chronic Stress, researchers have come to agree; can lead to cardiovascular disease, diabetes, impaired cognitive function and a weakened immune system. A recent study by British researchers at University College London reported that elevated chronic stress levels at the workplace lead to an increased risk of obesity, insulin intolerance and high cholesterol. Other research has shown a correlation between chronic stress and asthma, allergies, even the time it takes for wounds to heal.

7. The passage is mainly concerned with _____.

A) how people can cope with the bad effects of stress on their bodies
B) the relationship between stress and asthma, allergies and high cholesterol
C) why people are under the risk of feeling stress in their workplaces
D) the conflicts about chronic stress among the researchers
E) the adverse impacts of the chronic stress on human health

8. It is asserted in the passage that what makes stress a common issue being talked about these days _____.

A) is because it has become an irritating affliction for both active managers and teenagers
B) is that it is a hidden enemy that makes the body worn out without a proper disease
C) is a question that the researchers have been trying to answer for decades
D) is because it has evolved over the millennia as the body's physical and emotional response accelerated
E) is a popular matter of discussion among the experts

9. It can be inferred from the passage that according to one of the researches, _____.

A) the duration of the recuperation of an injury may change according to the levels of chronic stress
B) not all kinds of stress are bad
C) the more stressful you are the quicker you think
D) the main reason of obesity may be the chronic stress levels in the workplaces
E) there is only a little correlation between chronic stress and cardiovascular disease

Charles Dickens was born on the South coast of England, near Portsmouth, in 1812. He began writing in his early twenties and wrote his first novel, The Pickwick Papers, in 1836. He always saw himself as a crusading novelist. He had great sympathy for the poor and downtrodden and many of his books highlight the injustices to be found in the society of the time. Charles Dickens was perhaps the greatest novelist of the nineteenth century. All his novels are still in print and they present a rich canvas of life and behaviour at all levels of contemporary society, many of his works, such as Oliver Twist, Great Expectations, David Copperfield, A Tale of Two Cities and A Christmas Carol, have been filmed, televised and presented as both straight plays and musicals, revealing the power and timelessness of his writing.

10. As mentioned in the passage, Charles Dickens _____.

A) emphasized the societal unfairness of the era in most of his books
B) was undeniably the most eminent novelist of the nineteenth century
C) was regarded as a crusading writer by his readers
D) had a little interest in the people leading miserable lives in the society of his time
E) was the only child of a poor family living in Portsmouth

11. One may conclude from the passage that _____.

A) some of Dickens'novels aren't present on the shelves of the bookstores today
B) Great Expectations is the best novel of Charles Dickens
C) Charles Dickens wrote a lot of short stories and dramas concerning political issues
D) the fact that most of Dickens' novels have been applied for the screen displays the strength and immortality of his literary works
E) Dickens' first novel, The Pickwick Papers, didn't have impact on the literature world as much as Oliver Twist did

12. It is stated in the passage that Charles Dickens' novels _____.

A) weren't sold much in the nineteenth century
B) didn't help him prevent from being forgotten
C) exemplify a lot of scenes from the society that can be observed in the people's lifestyles and behaviours in the real life
D) are still in print but not easy to buy because of their high prices
E) were too complex and long to be filmed, televised or presented as plays and musicals

A long line of people waiting for the check-in; tired, and anxious, and not a few of them close to tears. Children separated from their parents. Armed and uniformed guards who make arbitrary-seeming selections. Intrusive body searches. Personal belongings turned carelessly out of bags. A dreary atmosphere of threat and intimidation. An African state close to collapse? Not at all. This is a scene repeated in a hundred first-world cities every hour-and an experience that is guaranteed to anyone who happens to have an airline ticket and who is determined to use it. Hard as it may be to believe, air travel was an adventure and a luxury not that long ago. As for airports, they were mere like branch, line railway stations than today's industrial-sized holding and storing centres for human beings. And check-in? Check-in had still to be invented.

13. In the passage, the setting is _____.

A) an African city
B) a railway station
C) a first world country
D) an airport
E) a police station

14. As is stated in the passage, check-in procedures of the airports _____.

A) were stricter in the past
B) are only for the people who have been suspected
C) may be exhausting for the passangers
D) are more common in underdeveloped countries
E) are the most entertaining parts of travelling

15. It may be understood from the passage that _____.

A) air travel is the most adventurous and luxurious experience of all
B) there was no such thing as check-in at the airports not that long ago
C) anybody who has an airline ticket is always humiliated in some airports
D) people never wait in a queue during the check-in process at the airports of first world cities
E) planes are now much more comfortable than any other means of transportation

In Kashmir, it has been one and half a year since the world turned upside down. Buildings crumbled, villages slipped off mountainsides, and lakes formed where rivers once flowed. The 7,6 magnitude earthquake that hammered northern Pakistan and India on Oct. 8/2005 took some 75,000 lives, injured 130,000 and left nearly 3.5 million people without food, jobs or homes-refugees in their own land. Almost overnight, scores of tent villages bloomed across the region, tended by international aid organizations, military personnal and jihadi groups working furiously to shelter the survivors before the onslaught of winter, mercifully, the season was mild. Fears of a second wave of death and suffering due to the cold proved unfounded. However, in many villages, electrical lines have not been repaired, neither have roads. Aid workers estimate that it will take years to rebuild what the earthquake took away. And for the thousands of survivors-many of their children, left maimed and bereft by the destruction- the recovery will never be complete.

16. One may infer from the passage that the 7,6 magnitude earthquake in Kashmir _____.

A) left exactly 3,5 million people without home
B) devastated all the lands of the refugees who had settled in Kashmir before
C) killed strictly 75.000 people
D) didn't cause as much damage to the northern Pakistan and India as it was exaggerated
E) has changed the geographical and geogical features of the region

17. It is stated in the passage that the weather conditions during the winter in Kashmir _____.

A) were a way merciful but cold took a lot of lives.
B) were mild just as the people had known before.
C) showed that aid organizators were right to fear about.
D) weren't harsh enough to kill the survivors of the earthquake as worried about.
E) caused a second way of death and suffering after the destructive earthquake.

18. According to the passage, for aid workers, reconstruction of what the earthquake knocked down will last for years but _____.

A) the government can't afford recreating a region
B) without electrical lines and roads, it is impossible to survive and work
C) the whole recuperation will never be possible because of the physical and psychological damages of the destructive earthquake on people, especially children
D) survivors from the earthquake have already started to obtain what they had lost again
E) electrical wires haven't been repaired yet

Modern Formula One is a multibillion dolar sport that couldn't function without skilled teamwork and the latest technology. This season, the Orange Arrows team is strengthening its arsenal of technology solutions to streamline collaboration between team members and boost its racing competitiveness. Along with the usual wrenches and screwdrivers, Orange Arrow engineers now utilize handheld wirefree terminals that collect, synchronize and distribute all information relating to any of the thousands of possible vehicle settings. Car and race data are downloaded from the track to Orange Arrows headquarters where they are referenced to performance databases and computer models. This allows design teams to predict what effect a modification might have and to remotely offer advice on how to fine-tune the live vehicle configurations, and thus improve the chances of victory.

19. As mentioned in the passage, Formula One today is a kind of sport _____.

A) that gives great pleasure to both the audience and the racers
B) in which Orange Arrows team is always regarded as the possible favourite winner
C) which requires proficient and cooperative squad provided with the current equipment including high-tech
D) including approximate configurations and utilization of public statistics
E) of which a lot of companies just don't realize the fact that the latest technology and skilled teamwork are the basic components

20. It is stated in the passage that hand held wirefree terminals _____.

A) do not function effectively to download car and race information
B) are used by the engineers in Orange Arrow to gather, organize and deliver all the data about each of the thousand possible craft settings
C) have already become outdated
D) are the only technological buildings required by the design teams to strengthen racing competitiveness
E) cost a great deal of money to construct

21. As it is mentioned in the passage, Orange Arrow headquarters _____.

A) have actually no use in the racing industry.
B) was intended by an intelligent entrepreneur to profit from the races.
C) are the technological craft in which car and race data downloaded from the track are linked to performance database and computer models
D) are the vehicle configuration panels on the basis
E) offers solutions on how to deal with the configuration panels

Normally the streets of Oaxaca, a city of some 250,000 people in the southern Mexico, are full of tourists. They come to enjoy the nearby Zapotec ruins of Monte Alban and the city's colonial churches, Indian markets and art galleries. But Oaxaca, designated a world heritage site by the United Nations, is today a much sorrier sight. For the past four months, it has been in the grip of a bitter political conflict that one local politician calls "a low-intensity urban war." The Zocalo, the main square, is permanently occupied by several thousand protestors; more are camped out around the city. They have seized several radio stations and public offices. Many streets are blocked by barricades of parked buses or corrugated iron. Angry graffiti, in red and black spray-paint, disfigure many historical buildings. Not only has this conflict driven of the tourists; it also threatens peaceful nature of the citizens in the country.

22. It is understood from the passage that Oaxaca _____.

A) is a city in southern Mexico which is visited mostly by Mexican tourists
B) has been occupied by the enemies permanently
C) attracts a lot of tourists with its historical and social aspects
D) is famous for its angry protestors, most of whom are local young people
E) is one of the poorest but most democratic city in Mexico

23. One may infer from the passage that Oaxaca _____.

A) is under the protection of the United Nations because of its importance in history
B) is a place where people often fall into political conflict
C) has a permanent traffic jam in its streets to be solved
D) is a highly urbanized city in Southern Mexico
E) presents only historical tastes for the tourists

24. It is stated in the passage the bitter political conflict in the city _____.

A) can cause the city to be dismissed from the list of world heritage site by the United Nations
B) discourages the tourists to stay in the city and spoils the peace of the people living in Mexico
C) may lead many protestors to be arrested
D) weakens the political power of the government
E) gives no harm to the transportation and tourism in the city

He may not inherit everything from his father. But King George Tupou V, Tonga's new monarch, who has been sworn in, but not formally crowned, following the dead of the battleship-sized King Taufa'ahau Tupou IV on September 10th, already has a picturesque palace, the royal title and a good deal of respect from his 110.000 subjects in Tonga. The big question is whether he will bow to the pleas of the country's growing prodemocracy movement, and limit his throne's huge powers.

1. It is understood from the passage that King George Tupou V _____.

A) learned all he knows about the royalty from his father
B) owes his father everything
C) has no respect towards King Taufa'ahau Tupou IV
D) hasn't been declared as the new King of Tonga legally yet
E) lost his father during democracy movement

2. One may infer from the passage that in Tonga _____.

A) Tupou V will not accept being the new king
B) King George Tupou V inherited a huge amount of money from Tupou V's father
C) most of people reject accepting his authority
D) hasn't been able to get his royal respect and title yet
E) there is spreading demand for regime change

3. As concluded in the passage that the monarch in Tonga _____.

A) has failed to notice the growing influence of pro-democracy activists on the subjects
B) has been supporting the leading figures of the country's growing prodemocracy movement for a long time
C) isn't a matter of the royal family
D) has enormous authorization in ruling the country
E) has played a modernising role in governing the country in recent years

Peter Yellowless, a professor of psychiatry at the University of California, Davis, has been teaching about schizophrenia for 20 years, but says that he was never really able to explain to his students just how their patients suffer. So he went online, downloaded some free software and entered Second Life. This is a "meta-verse" (i.e., metaphysical universe), a three-dimensional world whose users, or "residents", can create and be anything they want. Mr Yellowless created hallucinations. A resident might walk through a virtual hospital word, and a picture on the wall would suddenly flash the word "shit-face". The floor might fall away, leaving the person to walk on stepping stones above the clouds. An in-world television set would change from showing an actual speech by Bob Hawke, Australia's former prime minister, into Mr Hawke shouting, "Go and kill yourself, you wretch!" A reflection in a mirror might have bleeding eyes and die. When Mr Yellowless invited, as part of a trial, Second Life's public into the ward, and 73% of the visitors said afterwards that it "improved (their) understanding of schizophrenia."

4. According to the passage, Second Life _____.

A) is a software enabling its users to create a 3-dimensional world in which they can be and do anything they wish
B) is a computer game designed for university students who study psychiatry
C) is a computer programme created just for fun and leisure
D) is a metaphysical online world in which its users are passive and can give no reactions
E) is a built virtual online world whose population and economy are growing gradually

5. It is stated in the passage that by means of Second Life, Peter Yellowless _____.

A) experienced a failure in his attempts to make his students comprehend schizophrenia better
B) gained great fame as a psychiatrist throughout the world
C) could download free software easier than before
D) tried to improve his understanding of how his patients suffer from schizophrenia
E) produced sample hallucinations and tried to explain to his students how the schizophrenics suffer

Lame from birth, yet with a talent for landing on his feet, Charles Maurice de Talleyrand-Perigord was for cartoonists a natural. As statesman and diplomat, he was at or never far from the centre of power through every upheaval that shook France and Europe between the fall of the Bastille and the collapse of the restored Bourbon monarchy in 1830. The "price with six heads", as one caricature nicely pictured him, was a bishop in the "ancient regime, "the revolutionist" in 1789, diplomat for Napoleon, minister to Lous XVIII and lastly-by which time he was already in his late 70s "an ambassador" in London for Louis Philippe, the "citizen king". Such frequent shifts inevitably won him many enemies. But with each turn of the carousel former foes would become friends again. Talleyrand rose late, dressed slowly and played a lot of whist. He took a similar approach to politics, using time and delay to advantage.

7. One may infer from the passage that as a politician, Talleyrand _____.

A) had a view of what was good for France and also Europe, to which he stuck through revolution, war and restoration
B) never forget his old partnerships throughout his career
C) always managed to be in a good, high and powerful position under any circumstances in France
D) could never be shrewd enough to manipulate the chaotic environment of his era
E) was a corrupt and immoral opportunist of exaggerated reputation interested mainly in his family name

8. It can be understood from the passage, Talleyrand _____.

A) served at least three rulers, having different political responsibilities
B) couldn't play whist well
C) had a strict habit of getting up early
D) was harshly criticized by the cartoonists at his time
E) was never at the centre of power

9. As is stated in the passage, Talleyrand _____.

A) wasn't a successful statesman at all
B) was believed to have six heads by people who never saw him
C) never forgave his enemies all his life
D) had a handicup in his feet
E) worked as an minister in London for Napoleon

The impact of the American periodical press also has been technological and social. The large, mass-circulation magazines have influenced the smaller magazines, which in many instances seek to imitate their appearance and to emulate the high quality of their printing, layout, and make-up. They also have influenced magazines around the world. Europe, for example, is given to publishing magazines resembling "Life" and "Look", and almost no heavily industrialized country is without its imitator of "Time". An example to this is "Der Spiegel" in Germany. The social effect has to do with the discharge or failure to discharge its social responsibilities. These include the obligation to provide the people with a fair presentation of facts, with honestly held opinions, and with truthful advertising.

11. According to the passage _____.

A) American perodical press has no contribution to its European counterpart
B) European magazines know very little about the American ones
C) smaller magazines have influenced the bigger ones throughout the history
D) der Spiegel is a magazine which originated in the USA
E) nearly all the heavily industrialized countries have a magazine resembling to "Time"

10. It's understood from the passage that news magazines like "Life, Look, and Time" _____.

A) are resented in European countries
B) sell very well throughout the world
C) are respected as models for foreign magazines
D) do not discharge social responsibilities at all
E) are sold extremely expensively on the market

12. As concluded in the passage, magazines _____.

A) shouldn't compete with television for advertising
B) ought to be subsidized
C) must imitate European models
D) shouldn't accept untruthful advertising
E) have to make a profit at any cost

A team of astronomers from the Institute of Technology, led by Djorgovski, may have glimpsed the dawn of our universe. In 2001, this team reported that it had spotted the "cosmic renaissance, " the era when the first starlight shone through the cosmos. Just days earlier, a team from the Sloan Sky Survey had announced finding evidence of the cosmic "dark ages"—the period of about half a billion years after the Big Bang when dark fog filled the newly created space of our universe. The cosmic renaissance brought an end to the dark ages, as the first galaxies and quasars burned through the murky cosmos, making it transparent. The teams used data collected with powerful telescopes to observe the light emissions of quasars, the most distant known objects in the universe. Quasars, which are amazingly bright, can essentially offer snapshots of the universe from hundreds of millions of years ago.

13. The latter team aforementioned has declared that _____.

A) in the first period of our universe was full of dark fog
B) they found out the proof of the dark age of the universe
C) cosmic renaissance happened after one of the stars shone
D) the rise of the cosmos was believed to start with the first light of the sun
E) dark ages were brought an end with the cosmic renaissance

İREM YAYINCILIK

14. What do the two teams have in common?

A) Both teams have mutual interests on how to scrutinize the history of the universe.
B) The teams worked on the same project in the twentieth century.
C) Not only the Institute of Technology but Sloan Sky Survey have astronauts who have experience in space exploration as well.
D) The devices used by the teams for gaining information on quasars were powerful telescopes
E) The main subject of the teams were about Big Bang.

15. We can infer from the passage that quasars _____.

A) the light of which reaching us basically comes from a very distant time
B) which are surprisingly bright stars can give us details about the history of the galaxies
C) whose photographs taken by a team of scientists inform the danger experienced during the history
D) have always been in flames since the beginning of the universe
E) are the farthest known objects detected by huge telescopes

For those of us without a family crest and signet ring, there is a place a few inches above the finger where social standing can still be displayed–the wrist. With its ticking heartbeat, the mechanical wristwatch is alive and never felt better. And for most people, the very definition of a luxury watch is a Rolex. It has a mystical aura of high fashion, high quality and high price. It's the most popular watch, with an estimated 750,000 sold annually and even more changing hands each year in the second–hand market. The reason for Rolex's stunning success is the firm's genius at marketing to people who aspire to own and can afford to buy, the accoutrements of popular culture's nobility. The typical Rolex buyer is seeking to have something their neighbours and friends either have or wish they had. Rolex has struck a balance between making a product that is just expensive enough so not everyone will own one, but just affordable enough for it to be within the reach of many.

16. One point emphasized in the passage is that _____.

A) as it was in the old days, it is still indispensable to have a signet ring or a family crest for those who want to own the highest social rank
B) Rolex stands as the epitome of Swiss watchmaking excellence
C) the wristwatch may be regarded as a symbol of social status and luxury by most of the people today
D) as a prestigious brand, Rolex also determines all kinds of fashion worldwide
E) but for its prestige and price, Rolex defies its own image in the second–hand market

17. The author relates the success of Rolex _____.

A) to its being so expensive and prestigious
B) to its smart marketing system which determines and addresses to the target customer
C) in an exaggerated style
D) so clearly that even the rival firms must respect it
E) to the people who work in its administration and marketing departments

18. One conclusion we can draw from the passage is that _____.

A) Rolex holds the biggest share of the electrical appliance market in the world
B) the standard Rolex buyer is always in the pursuit of possessing the items which their neighbours already have
C) Rolex is believed to earn $ 750,000 annually although it's intensely secretive about its financial affairs
D) Rolex can be defined as one of the most popular watches of all
E) Rolex has managed to make a product that is attainable for many despite its price

Some modern anthropologists hold that biological evolution has shaped not only human morphology but also human behavior. The role those anthropologists ascribe to evolution is not of dictating the details of human behavior but one of imposing constraints –ways of feeling, thinking, and acting that "come naturally" in archetypal situations in any culture. Our "frailties" –emotions and motives such as rage, fear, greed, gluttony, joy, lust, love– may be a very mixed assortment quality: we are, as we say, "in the grip" of them. And thus they give us oursense of constraints. Unhappily, some of those frailties our need for ever-increasing security among them are presently maladaptive. Yet beneath the overlay of cultural detail, they, too, are said to be biological in direction, and therefore as natural to us as are our appendixes. We would need to comprehend throughly their adaptive origins in order to understand how badly they guide us now. And we might then begin to resist their pressure.

19. The author implies that control to any extent over the "frailties" that constrain our behavior is though to presuppose _____.

A) that those frailties and adaptive are recognized as currently beneficial and adaptive
B) that there is little or no overlay of cultural detail that masks their true nature
C) that there are cultures in which those frailties do not "come naturally" and from which such control can be learned
D) a full understanding of why those frailties evolved and of how they function now
E) a thorough grasp of the principle that cultural detail in human behavior can differ arbitrarily from society to society

İREM YAYINCILIK

20. It can be inferred that in his discussion of maladaptive frailties the author assumes that _____.

A) evolution does not favor the emergence of adaptive characteristics over the emergence of maladaptive ones
B) any structure or behavior not positively adaptive is regarded as transitory in evolutionary theory
C) maladaptive characteristics, once fixed, make the emergence of other maladaptive characteristics more likely
D) the designation of a characteristic as being maladaptive must always remain highly tentative
E) changes in the total human environment can outpace evolutionary change

21. Which of the following most probably provides an appropriate analogy from human morphology for the "details" versus "constraints" distinction made in the passage in relation to human behaviour?

A) The ability of most people to see all the colors of the visible spectrum as against most peoples inability to name any but the primary colors
B) The ability of even the least fortunate people to show compassion as against people's inability to mask their feelings completely
C) The ability of some people to dive to great depths as against most people's inability to swim long distance
D) The psychological profile of those people who are able to delay gràtification as against people's inability to control their lives completely
E) The greater lung capacity of mountain peoples that helps them live in oxygen-poor air as against people's inability to fly without special apparatus

For most modern airports, the major design problem is scale –how to allow adequate space on the ground for maneuvering wide–body jets while permitting convenient and rapid movement of passengers departing, arriving, or transferring from one flight to another. Most designs for airport terminals take one of three approaches. In the linear plan, the building may be straight or curved. The passengers' board aircraft parked next to the terminal. This plan works well for small airports that need to provide boarding areas for only a few aircraft at a time. In the satellite plan, passengers board aircraft from small terminals that are separated from the main terminals. Passengers reach the satellites by way of shuttle trains or underground passage ways that have shuttle trains or moving side walks. The transporter plan employs some system of transport to move passengers from the terminal building to the aircraft. If buses are used, the passengers must climb a flight of stairs to board the aircraft. If mobile lounges are used, they can link up directly with the aircraft and protect passengers from the weather.

22. We may infer from the passage that scale would not pose a major design problem at airports if _____.

A) other forms of transportation were more efficient
B) airplanes could fly faster
C) airports were larger
D) aircraft did not need so much space to maneuver on the ground
E) there were no airplanes

23. According to the passage, the linear plan would probably be best at _____.

A) a busy airport
B) an airport used by many small aircraft
C) an airport that serves a large city
D) an airport with only a few arrivals or departures
E) only under good weather conditions

24. It's implied in the passage that the term "satellite plan" is used because _____.

A) satellites are launched and tracked from these sites
B) the plan makes use of the most modern, high-technology equipment
C) airports that make use of this plan utilize data from weather satellites
D) it initiates the idea of space travelling
E) small terminals encircle the main terminal like satellites around a planet

Refrigeration is a process of lowering the temperature in a given space and maintaining it for the purpose of chilling foods, preserving certain substances, or providing an atmosphere conducive to bodily comfort. Storing perishable foods, furs, pharmaceuticals, or other items under refrigeration is commonly known as cold storage. Such refrigeration checks both bacterial growth and adverse chemical reactions that occur in the normal atmosphere. The use of natural or manufactured ice for refrigeration was widespread until shortly before World War I, when mechanical and electric refrigerators became available. Ice owes its effectiveness as a cooling agent to the fact that it has a constant fusion temperature of 320°F. In order to melt, ice must absorb heat amounting to 143,3Btu/lb. The presence of a dissolved salt lowers the melting point of ice by several degrees. Foodstuffs maintained at this temperature, or slightly above it, have an increased storage life.

1. As is stated in the passage, cold storage is often used to _____.

A) chill certain foods so as to keep them tender
B) provide a temperature suitable to bodily comfort in houses
C) store certain medicines and foodstuffs
D) lower the temperature in a room
E) supply constant energy and power for heating

2. According to the passage, dissolved salt _____.

A) allows ice to melt at a lower temperature
B) prevents ice from melting
C) increases the storage life of foodstuffs
D) has a constant fusion temperature of 320°F
E) checks adverse chemical reactions

3. As is mentioned in the passage, cold storage _____.

A) relies on the use of manufactured ice
B) promotes chemical reactions in goods
C) has the same temperature as normal atmospheric conditions
D) halts bacterial growth
E) was never used before World War I

4. As it's stated in the passage that _____.

A) the usage of ice for refrigeration started after World War I with the availability of the mechanical and electric refrigerators
B) refrigeration protects certain substances, supplies a helpful atmosphere to bodily comfort and blocks harmful chemical reactions that occur in the normal atmosphere
C) storing short lived foods, products connected with medicine and other substances is defined as refrigeration
D) manufactured ice isn't as effective as the natural icein the process of refrigeration
E) when food preserved at a certain temperature, this increases its quality of nutrition

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS), a human disease that ravages the immune system, undermining the body's capacity to defend itself against certain microbial organisms. It usually leads to death from multiple infections in a few months to several years from the time of onset. The disease was first identified in 1980 among homosexual men in New York and California, and by mid - 1993 it had strickened more than 315,000 persons in the United States alone, causing nearly 195,000 fatalities. There were growing numbers of cases in Europe, Africa, Asia and Latin America as well, and about 14 million people worldwide were believed to be symptomless carriers of the disease. Although male homosexuals continue to constitute a major portion of the victims in many countries, the risk groups also include growing numbers of both male and female intravenous drug abusers and infants of mothers afflicted with the disease. In addition, there is some heterosexual transmission of AIDS. The disease has also occurred among hemophiliacs, who receive clotting factor derived from the pooled blood of many donors.

5. According to the passage, AIDS _____.

A) is only observed in homosexual men
B) is most prevalent in American continent
C) is a human ailment which destroys the body's self protection system that defends the body against some infected organisms
D) has long been regarded as a kind of treatment applied to defected immune system cases
E) hardly ever leads to death

6. As is mentioned in the passage, homosexuals _____.

A) form a notable ratio of the AIDS cases in most of the countries
B) all die from AIDS in the end
C) were previously believed to be symptomless carries of the disease
D) were first identified in 1980 in New York and California
E) can be saved from the disease by an efficient treatment

7. We may infer from the passage that _____.

A) AIDS kills its victim immediately after it has infected the body
B) the transmission of AIDS occurs only through infected blood
C) AIDS mostly occurs among drug abusers and hemophiliacs
D) the causative agent of AIDS has been introduced from the United States
E) it seems as if the number of AIDS cases is quite likely to double in the future

8. According to the passage it is understood that AIDS _____.

A) was first identified in 1980 among drug dealers in some of the states
B) is a disease destroying the immune system of the body and slowly injuring its function to protect itself against microbial organisms
C) brought about nearly 195,000 cases 315,000 of which resulted in deaths
D) causes death from various infections in a couple of months from the time of onset
E) can be seen among 14 million people worldwide

New York successfully averted bankruptcy in the mid–1970s through the creation of the Municipal Assistance Corporation, which issued nearly $2 billion in special bonds to help finance city spending, and through a loan program offered by the federal government later in 1975. But the essential problems of the city are still present and continue to play a role in how the city is managed, even today. In the 1970's, income from taxation was limited by the shrinking of New York's middle class population, which resulted in revenues inadequate for supporting the vast, expensive city government. A number of major businesses left the city, taking with them jobs, income, and more tax revenues. The wealth and prosperity of New York, during this financial crisis, slowly dwindled.

9. The passage is mainly concerned with _____.

A) the financial climate of New York in the mid 1900s
B) New York's social and political troubles in the early 1970s
C) taxation system in American municipalities
D) the economic decline of New York in the 1970s
E) the history of New York

10. It's implied in the passage that New York _____.

A) had enjoyed a period of economic strength prior to 1970
B) has permanently escaped the threat of bankruptcy
C) managed to avoid calling on the national government for assistance
D) lost its pre-eminent place in American society afterwards
E) has never had any other problems since 1970s

11. According to the passage, income from taxation decreased because _____.

A) the number of middle - class people in New York increased
B) other revenues boosted
C) the prosperity of the city faded
D) people donated their individual assets to the government
E) middle-class population in New York diminished

12. New York managed not to declare bankruptcy in 1970s with the help of _____.

A) reaching the solutions to the essential problems of the city such as unemployent and crime
B) inadequate incomes that was backing the vast, expensive city government up
C) the wealth and prosperity of New York during the financial crisis
D) the formation of a kind of foundation and a plan by the government
E) revenues from tariffs taken from the middle class population

Every scientific discipline tends to develop its own special language because it finds ordinary words inadequate, and psychology is no different. The purpose of this special jargon is not to mystify non-psychologists; rather, it allows psychologists to accurately describe the phenomena they are discussing and to communicate with each other effectively. Of course, psychological terminology consists in part of everyday words such as emotion, intelligence, and motivation, but psychologists use these words somewhat differently. For example, a non-psychologist may use the term anxiety to mean nervousness or fear, but most psychologists reserve the term to describe a condition produced when one fears events over which one has no control.

13. The passage is mainly concerned with _____.

A) effective communication
B) the special language of psychology
C) two definitions of the word "anxiety"
D) the jargon of science
E) how we speak

14. According to the passage _____.

A) psychologists use a special jargon in order to astonish the non-psychologists
B) some words we use in our daily speeches can somewhat have different meanings among the psychologists
C) anxiety means nervousness in psychology
D) most scientific disciplines plagiarize special terminology from each other
E) using a special jargon contributes positively to our lives if we suffer from a serious condition

15. As is stated in the passage _____.

A) psychological jargon consists of everyday words
B) emotion, intelligence and motivation are the words used in all scientific disciplines
C) one benefit of special jargon is that it helps psychologists define the conditions correctly
D) a non-psychologist would never use a psychological term
E) since they like to look down on people, psychologists like to use a special jargon to communicate with each other

16. As it is stated in the passage _____.

A) in psychology jargon anxiety means that one cannot control his behaviours
B) the usual words are sufficient for a scientific discipline
C) non-psychologists cannot understand psychologists thoroughly and accurately
D) psychology jargon is far more difficult than any other terminologies
E) psychologists use some daily used words in terms of their field

The International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement is an international humanitarian agency dedicated, in time of war, to alleviating the sufferings of wounded soldiers, civilians, and prisoners of war. Moreover, in time of peace it not only renders medical aid and other help to people afflicted by major disasters, but performs other public service functions. The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) comprises a group of up to 25 Swiss citizens, with headquarters in Switzerland. The International Conference of the Red Cross, held every four years in different countries, brings together all the representatives of the Red Cross organizations around the world and those governments that have ratified the Geneva Conventions. In 1986 the movement's name was changed to include the Red Crescent, the organization's name in most muslim nations. The initiative for founding the Red Cross came from the 19th century Swiss philanthropist Jean Henri Dunant. Appalled by the almost complete lack of care for wounded soldiers on the battlefield, he appealed to the nations to found societies devoted to the aid of the wounded in wartime.

17. According to the passage, the Red Cross and Red Crescent Movements _____.

A) are only active in the event of a war
B) deal only with natural disasters in peacetime
C) have both humanitarian and civic functions
D) solely care for military casualties in wartime
E) can not get on well with each other

18. According to the passage, The international Committee of the Red Cross _____.

A) is a religious organisation
B) has been ratified by the Geneva Convention
C) meets every four years at different locations
D) includes soldiers and prisoners of war
E) functions only in certain countries

19. As is mentioned in the passage, the founding of the Red Cross was instigated by ____.

A) the call for an international conference
B) the devotion of societies to aiding the world
C) the signing of a contract in Switzerland
D) the founder's experience of wartime casualties
E) the positive changes in social affairs in the world

20. We understand from the passage that _____.

A) main command center and all of the members of the Red Cross are in Switzerland
B) the Red Cross doesn't help countries if they aren't approved by Geneva Conventions
C) the foundation is mostly unwelcome in Muslim countries
D) every four year, thanks to this foundation people from different countries come together and share their cultural experiences
E) the Red Cross was founded by a benevolent person in order to provide enough care for injured soldiers

One aspect of American education that is seldom challenged is the lecture system. One major problem with lectures is that listening intelligently is hard work. Reading the same material in a textbook is a more efficient way to learn because students can proceed as slowly as they need to until the subject matter becomes clear to them. Attending lectures is passive learning, at least for inexperienced learners. Active learning, in which students write essays, perform experiments or hold discussions and then have their work evaluated by their instructor, is much better for those who have not yet fully learned how to learn. Taking notes can, of course, make a lecture more valuable. But very few students at the beginning of their university careers are able to do this. Usually, most students try to write down every word the lecturer says.

21. As it is pointed out in the passage, the lecture system _____.

A) encourages efficient learning
B) helps students to ask questions
C) makes lecturers good teachers
D) shows that listening may be hard work
E) is the best way of learning efficiently

22. As mentioned in the passage, an example of passive learning is _____.

A) writing essays
B) attending lectures
C) doing experiments
D) debating a point
E) holding discussions

23. According to the passage, reading a textbook is easier than listening to a lecture because _____.

A) the subject matters are almost always clear
B) the topic is usually easier to understand
C) the lecturer can answers questions
D) you can pay attention all the time
E) students can work as slowly as they want

24. We may infer from the passage that _____.

A) in active learning, the student learn the subject with various performances, the teacher is only a guide
B) lecturers' experience and performance are very significant during the learning process
C) when one takes notes, every word that the teacher says should be written down
D) American education system is perfect in many aspects when it is compared with Europe's
E) students' reading speed indicates their intelligence and ability of learning

The Jukes is the name given to a family of New York State that had an unusual record of crime and pauperism. In 1875, Richard Louis Dugdale, while making investigations on behalf of the New York Prison Association, found several of the same family imprisoned for various crimes. Becoming interested in the subject, he traced the history of the family through several generations; they were descendants of the two sons of a backwoodsman, called Max, who married two of the Jukes sisters, one of whom is known as "Margaret, the mother of Criminals." Exact information was obtained in relation to 709 out of the 1200 descendants and blood relations; of these, 140 had been imprisoned for crime. 280 had been paupers, dependent upon public support, and the large majority were of low physical and moral standard.

1. According to the passage _____.

A) Richard Louis Dugdale's ancestors were the descendants of the Jukes
B) the Jukes were forced by the criminals to commit crimes
C) all members of Jukes were somehow involved in a crime in their lives
D) the Jukes were actually innocent in all cases
E) there were an unusual number of people who committed crimes and pauperism in Jukes family

2. It may be inferred from the passage that _____.

A) it's not possible to discover anything about the history of a family
B) if two sisters marry the same man, their children have no opportunity to have high moral standard
C) society doesn't concern about the poor people
D) heredity plays an important role in committing crimes
E) all the descendants of the Jukes are definitely criminals

3. As is mentioned in the passage, Richard Louis Dugdale _____.

A) was asked to make an investigation by the Jukes
B) personally became interested in the Jukes himself during his investigations
C) was a member of the Jukes
D) was hired by the government to prepare a statistics on crime
E) was not interested in the Jukes at all

4. According to the passage _____.

A) Richard Louis Dugdale found out that family members were punished severely
B) the Jukes are the grandchildren of the two sons of a boondocks man
C) Richard Louis Dugdale thought that poverty was the main reason for those numerous crimes
D) Richard Louis Dugdale was a detective who was interested in history very much
E) after numerous criminal events that the Jukes family had committed, they became incredibly wealthy

Literature is often a reflection and a consequence of the time period it is written in, and the literary tradition of the United States mirrors the growth of a young nation searching for an identity of its own. As the colonists sought independence from England, writers of the same period sought to write "American" rather than English. In general sense, this meant writing in dialect with an overemphasis on local colour, but the task of deciding what exactly America was while writing about it became inextricable. This resulted in a reliance on realism, or writing of life as it really is, as in the works of Theodore Dreiser, Henry David Thoreau and Nathaniel Hawthorne. Mark Twain was the first American to succeed in "writing American" as he transcribed exactly the dialect of the people of the Mississipi. He too relied on the reality of the people and places around him.

5. The passage largely deals with _____.

A) the independence struggle of the pioneers in the United States
B) the identity conflict in people's mind in the post-colonial period and its reflections on American literature
C) literary movements and their effects on young societies
D) leading literary figures and the roles they played in the growth of young English people
E) the differences between American and English writers

6. According to the passage, early American writers tried to dissociate themselves from the English by _____.

A) emphasizing American speech patterns and habits
B) limiting themselves to colonial subject matter
C) writing in a more complicated style than the English
D) deciding too quickly what American literature was
E) imitating them in every field

7. It is understood from the passage that Mark Twain and Henry David Thoreau were similar in that _____.

A) they both plagiarised from Mark Twain
B) they wrote as if reality were an illusion
C) they. weren't interested in passion and fantasy at all
D) they used the world around them to create their America
E) they were heavily influenced by their puritanical background

8. It is understood from the passage that _____.

A) American literature is more realistic, profound and effective than the English literature
B) like Mark Twain, sometimes being too much realistic can cause lack of confidence
C) Mark Twain's first works were about independence and heroism, he used the exact dialects of the local people
D) Henry David Thoreau, Nathaniel Hawthorne and Mark Twain were under the impression of English writers
E) the writers couldn't decide what to write about America, it was complicated because they wanted to be original so this led them to be realistic

Henry Ford did not invent the automobile, but he certainly made it accessible through assembly–line production. His aim was to produce a light, speedy, reliable car at a low price to appeal to the mass market. When his partners in the Detroit Automobile Company wanted only to produce cars to order, Ford formed his own company, where he could carry out his own ideas. The Ford Motor Company mass-produced the "Model T" through assembly–line production, where one car could be constructed in 93 minutes. Ford also had independent and innovative ideas concerning the management of his business. He distrusted bankers and "wall street", which led him to put back an unheard–of percentage of profits into the expansion of his business while avoiding outside control. These practices enabled him to pay his factory workers a minimum wage of $5 which was double the going rate. His workers also took part in a profit–sharing scheme, another business innovation, all the while reducing the price of the model T.

9. From the passage, we learn that assembly–line production wouldn't work at the Detroit Automobile Company because _____.

A) they only wanted to produce cars as they were requested
B) Henry Ford separated from the company and set up his own business
C) they didn't want to produce the model T
D) Henry Ford couldn't personally go for it
E) they reduced the cost of the cars

10. It's implied in the passage that an incentive for Ford workers to be productive could have been _____.

A) Ford's strict hiring practices
B) Ford's profit–sharing scheme
C) a discount on new cars
D) the continuing demand for new cars
E) Ford's exaggerated control over the workers

11. We may infer from the passage that, Ford used his own profits to expand his business because he _____.

A) was interested in investing on wall street
B) wished to pay his workers less
C) was expecting an increase in the prices
D) gave up producing the "model T"
E) didn't want anyone else to have a say in his business

12. We may infer from the passage that the reasons of Ford's success were _____.

A) his partners in the Detroit Automobile Company also thought that mass production was a very innovative and bright idea
B) model T was a light, speedy and a reliable car at a low price
C) the workers could share the profit and he invested a great deal of his profit to develop his business
D) Ford founded his own company in order to produce cars to order
E) he counted on bankers and Wall Street and thanks to them he made a big profit from his investments

The best–known theory of galactic evolution is the one originated in the 1920s by Edwin P. Hubble. According to this theory, a galaxy begins as a vast accumulation of gases, chiefly hydrogen and helium, rotating about a central point. Thanks to the mutual gravitational attraction of matter, this "protogalaxy" slowly condenses into millions or, more often, billions of stars, collected in a gigantic, roughly spherical cloud. This is what Hubble called an "ellipsoidal" galaxy. Over many more millions of years, gravity slowly causes such a galaxy to contract, flatten, and become increasingly congested near its center. Due to the law of the conservation of angular momentum, it also begins to rotate more and more rapidly.

13. According to the passage, a "proto–galaxy" _____.

A) results from an "ellipsoidal" galaxy
B) is a great mass of gaseous materials
C) ignores the law of gaseous materials
D) consists of billions of spherical clouds
E) scatters much of the material it has

14. The purpose of the passage is to describe _____.

A) the conservation of angular momentum
B) three theories of galactic formation
C) the most famous theory of the evolution of galaxies
D) how the laws of physics influence the behavior of galaxies
E) the nucleus of the earth

15. According to the passage, gravity _____.

A) destroys the stars
B) was introduced to science with the Hubble Theory
C) gradually makes the galaxy to get closer to its center
D) didn't add much to Hubble's theory
E) predicts the decreasing speed of rotation

16. It is stated in the passage that _____.

A) Edwin P. Hubble had a lot of theories about galaxies and thier process of formation
B) a galaxy needs millions of years to get closer to its center due to the gravity
C) elipsoidal means a vast accumulation of gases
D) because of the law of the conservation of angular momentum the galaxy rotates about a central point
E) especially hydrogen and helium have very significant roles in causing a galaxy to be contract and flatten

Whether it's the melodic sound of an Eric Clapton solo or the growl of a heavy metal band, the electric guitar has influenced popular music and culture more than any other instrument. Rock's greatest musicians have always been closely identified with their guitars. But the instruments being designed for tomorrow's pop stars may look and sound rather different from today's familiar electric and acoustic guitars. As long as scientists and musicians work together harmoniously, the electric guitar will benefit from technological innovations. But for all the efforts of the guitar companies, design engineers, production managers and quality controllers, it's the musicians who finally make the instruments sing, and not necessarily in the way the guitar maker intended.

17. According to the passage _____.

A) without the electric guitar, there wouldn't be any rock or pop stars today
B) the electric guitar has not only been preferred by the rock stars but also by the famous pop singers
C) there are many instruments which have influenced the history of music more than the guitar
D) tomorrow's pop stars won't be able to use the electric guitar in their performances
E) the electric guitar can be referred as one of the oldest instruments in the world

18. It's clear from the passage that the electric guitar _____.

A) is the least influential factor in the development of music industry
B) has long been regarded as a heavy metal instrument
C) is going to renew itself in the future if both the people dealing with music and the scientists cooperate with each other
D) was first designed as an instrument for the solo performance
E) is a victim of technological studies as well as untalented musicians

19. It's concluded from the passage that _____.

A) the guitar maker always expects his instrument to be played by famous musicians
B) all the efforts made by the guitar companies are in vain
C) today's electric and acoustic guitars are to be innovated soon
D) without a good musician, a well – qualified guitar wouldn't make much sense
E) in the future, guitar is expected to change just in the hands of the musicians

20. It is implied in the passage that _____.

A) in spite of the technological innovations a guitar can not change too much
B) electric guitar is not only a musical instrument but also a mean of identification
C) musicians can not give the soul to the guitar on their own
D) acoustic guitars are more emotional and harmonic than electric guitars
E) the music effects millions of people and cultures; it is the common language

Most people today know how important it is to have a balanced diet. If for some reason, this is not possible; we have available to us a wide range of dietary supplements including vitamins and minerals. One of the earliest researchers to recognise the role dietary deficiencies play in disease was the Scottish surgeon, James Lind. Lind analysed the diets of thousands of British sailors who had taken long sea voyages and discovered that they ate little or no fresh fruit such as lemons or oranges. He came to the conclusion that a lack of these fruits led to the disease known as scurvy. Scurvy had occurred throughout history during times of warfare and famine when people could not get fresh foods like fruit, vegetables and meat.

1. It's emphasized in the passage that _____.

A) a balanced diet plays an important role in keeping yourself away from diseases
B) in sea, it is easier to develop diseases than on land
C) James Lind's studies on scurvy gave an end to the traditional diet in England
D) none of the researchers had recognised the importance of dietary supplements before James Lind's discovery
E) people must buy fresh foods during war

2. James Lind _____.

A) was the first to recognise the role that dietary deficiencies play in disease

Little is known about the early life of Leonardo Da Vinci. He was born in Italy and had very little formal schooling-only some reading, writing, and practice with an abacus. He had to teach himself many things, including Latin, in order to be able to read the scientific books that held the knowledge he wanted. Until his death in France at the age of 67, he was constantly busy reading, making notes, observing and sketching. Besides carrying on his studies, he worked on various projects in Milan and Florence for the rulers of these cities. He discovered laws of biology, and increased the knowledge of anatomy by dissecting corpses and making priceless drawings of the human body, including ones showing its internal structure. His genius showed itself not only in all the sciences, but also in the arts. His drawings for sculpture surpassed any work that had been done; and his paintings, although in poor condition now, are masterpieces unequaled by any other artist. The "Mona Lisa" was a starting point for a new art and still fascinates its viewers. Another picture, "The Last Supper, " considered the most famous painting in the world, is a wonder of design. He has definitely been one of the most splendid figures of human race with his everything in the history of man.

5. As is stated in the passage, except some reading, writing and practice with an abacus, Leonardo Da Vinci _____.

A) tried to get all the information to explain the scientific events during his formal schooling
B) learned Latin at school in France
C) wasn't taught anything in the university
D) showed outstanding ability in mathematics and in every branch of design during his childhood

Forty–one years ago, the female pill made its debut and revolutionised the world. Today, a contraceptive "pill" for men is undergoing clinical trials – and your correspondent is one of the test subjects. The male pill is actually a plastic rod, about the size of a hairgrip, which releases a steady dose of synthetic form of the hormone progesterone, called etonogestrel, into the bloodstream. Progesterone is neither a female nor a male hormone. However, in men it exists in fairly low quantities. Six months ago, I had the rod implanted in my upper arm, under local anaesthetic. The procedure was painless, although it did leave a large bruise on my left bicep. Assuming I'm not amongst the 14 % of volunteers who are on the placebo, I am now infertile. (Clint Witchalls from "The Economist")

9. We understand from the passage that _____.

A) the female contraceptive "pill" on the market made its first public appearance in the late 60's
B) the male version of the pill has been used by men for nearly six months
C) the male pill functions in the body by releasing a hormone called blood stream
D) thanks to the plastic rod used, no test subject had pain during the experiment
E) the female pill didn't catch on the market

10. It's pointed out in the passage that the writer _____.

A) regrets to have assisted the infertilization process
B) is against such experiments in medicine
C) himself also took part in this particular vasectomy trial
D) is a doctor working in the gynaecology field
E) definitely won't have any children in the future

11. As it is stated in the passage _____.

A) progesterone exists in women in lower quantities in comparison with men
B) progesterone switches off the production of eggs in men
C) during the test nobody was put on the placebo in order to be convincing
D) since the subjects weren't anaesthetized, they felt great pain during the procedure
E) the hormone "progesterone" can be available both in man's and woman's body

12. According to the passage _____.

A) the writer himself had an operation as a test subject for clinical examination
B) infertility studies which are both for man and woman have taken place at the same time
C) though a general anaesthetic is needed for this kind of operation, the writer didn't choose so
D) the writer got his body operated in order to see the effects of the remedy
E) the writer was one of the few subjects taking part in the experiment

"One of the first duties of the physician is to educate the masses not to take medicine", observed William Osler, one of the giants of 19th–century medicine. Several years ago, I was given a prescription for an acne medication which worked wonders for my complexion – so much so that when the prescription ran out, I kept refilling it myself, thanks to a friendly neighbourhood pharmacist. After a few months on the medication, I started to experience dizzy spells. I dismissed them as overwork, and continued to take pills. About a year later, these spells became a curse. For a week, I lay in the darkened room vomitting with my eyes shut. Doctors have a word for this living hell – auditory nerve damage. Thankfully, I recovered but became permanently deaf in one ear.

13. In this passage the writer's aim is to show us _____.

A) the importance of self–confidence during a treatment
B) how too much self – help can be bad for your health
C) the inequality in the doctor–patient relationship
D) that people shouldn't be discouraged when they take medication
E) the history of medication

A recent survey in a fashion magazine to discover the colour women prefer reveals that black is still the first choice of the majority, and the various models that can be lumped together under the common heading of "the little black dress" are still reckoned to be the safest bet for any girl who wants to make a good impression preference has not changed does not mean that black has always been the favourite but it does mean that it has led the way virtually without a break for the past eighty-five years. It was in the 1920s that black, until then a colour worn almost exclusively by those in mourning, came into fashion among the smart set. In the context of social history, it can be argued that when black became acceptable to the young, it was a sign that women were beginning to achieve independence. It is perhaps no coincidence that it was at about that time that they were given the vote in many countries.

21. According to the passage _____.

A) women don't prefer black any more because it's being worn during funerals nowadays
B) black has been among the preferred colours of women since the 1920s
C) wearing black helps women find a job easier
D) colourful fashion has become the trend since the 1920s so black has lost its attraction for smart young women
E) all well-known dress designers have preferred colours other than black since 1920s

22. It may be understood from the passage that "the little black dress" _____.

A) is still the choice that's most likely to make a good impression
B) can only be worn by young girls
C) could never become acceptable to the young
D) doesn't suit everyone because of its colour
E) is so provocative that parents don't let their children wear it

23. It is implied in the passage that black came into fashion at the same time as women were given the vote because _____.

A) black was an ambigious colour
B) it enabled the women to choose the best outfit for themselves
C) black was the colour mostly worn by female politicians
D) voting popularised the colour among women
E) wearing black perhaps seemed to represent achieving independence in women

24. According to the passage it is widely believed among models that _____.

A) "the little black dress" is the idea which is still popular unlike the long ones
B) wearing black creates an attractive atmosphere
C) gathering is a common custom that should be done regularly
D) the safest dress to be worn is "the little black dress"
E) not the colour but the fitness comes forth

Ernest Miller Hemingway was born in 1899. He was the second of six children. In 1917 Hemingway joined the Kansas City Star, as a club reporter. The following year he volunteered to work as an ambulance driver on the Italian front where he was badly wounded but twice decorated for his services. In 1922 he reported on the Greco-Turkish war then two years later resigned from journalism to devote himself to fiction. He was passionately involved with bullfighting, big-game hunting, and deep-sea fishing, and his writing reflected this. He visited Spain during the Civil War and described his experiences in the bestseller, For Whom the Bells Toll. His direct and deceptively simple style of writing spawned generations of imitators but no equals. Recognition of his position in contemporary literature came in 1954 when he was awarded the Nobel Prize, following the publication of The Old Man and the Sea. Ernest Hemingway died in 1961.

The question of who the American Indians are and how they came to live in North America has long puzzled scientists. The most popular modern theory says that the Indians came from Siberia to Alaska when the Bering Strait was not underwater. At that time there was a land bridge between Asia and America. This "land bridge" was a result of the fact that much of the water that was used to cover the region became frozen in glaciers during the Ice Age. This left the land dry and bare. With the water gone, wandering bands of Siberian tribes simply walked over from what is now modern Russia to what is now the modern United States. They were probably in pursuit of the herds of animals which were their primary source of food. From northwest Alaska, they then travelled south and east to populate North, Central, and South America.

5. According to the passage, the early Indians probably came to the North America continent because _____.

A) of a land bridge covered with water
B) they were following the masses of animals for food
C) they wanted to live with the native Americans
D) harsh weather conditions forced them to migrate
E) they were in pursuit of conquering an unexploited region

6. We may infer from the passage that, the natives of North, Central and South America _____.

A) are most probably the descendants of people who once lived in Siberia
B) traveled to South America and founded a more sophisticated civilisation
C) could even be Turks who had immigrated to Alaska owing to a famine
D) are longing for Russia which had been their original settlement
E) built a way called "land bridge" to America instead of Bering Strait

7. As mentioned in the passage, "land bridge" _____.

A) was totally underwater when the Asian travelers passed through it
B) symbolizes the independence of America continent
C) was once home to Russian natives
D) was actually a frozen mass of water through which Asia and America were connected to each other
E) is a part of unrealistic modern theory

8. According to the passage there is a controversy among researchers _____.

A) whether the Indians came to America in large groups
B) about how the first residents of America came to the continent
C) how they could cross the Bering Strait on stormy weather
D) why they were in need of searching new lands
E) why the dwellers chose to settle in different parts of the continent

While there are many differences between high school and college, I'd have to say that the most important ones all involve freedom. Everyone has to attend high school, at least until tenth grade, so very often you find classes where the students aren't serious about learning. College is exactly the opposite. People are there voluntarily because they want to learn and improve themselves. As a result college students are much more serious and interested in high school; you can't leave the class without permission. On the other hand, if college students need to leave a class to make a phone call, they just leave. Finally in high school classes are assigned and the same classes are held everyday. However, in college, most classes only meet two or three days a week and students have many options.

9. The passage is mainly concerned with _____.

A) high school students' psychological problems
B) freedom for students
C) how the curriculum is arranged at schools
D) the dissimilarities between college and high school
E) the resemblance of high schools to the colleges

10. We may infer from the passage that college students _____.

A) aren't as serious as their high-school counterparts
B) needn't go to school
C) can go where they please without informing their parents
D) go to the school only two or three days a week
E) are more purposeful than the high school students

11. As concluded in the passage, _____.

A) high schools hold different classes everyday
B) college students have to attend all classes
C) parents have to stay at school until 10
D) it's compulsory to study at college
E) class hours are mostly left to the students' choice at colleges

12. According to the passage among all the differences, _____.

A) voluntarily carried out studies are needed in colleges
B) the most significant one is the independence that the student has
C) not only attendance is required in college
D) permission is not in question in most of the colleges
E) seven days a week a student has to attend classes in high school

Ever since our departure, the seagulls have been following our ship, apparently without effort, almost without moving their wings. Their fire, straight navigation scarcely leans upon the breeze. Suddenly, a loud plop at the level of the kitchens stirs up a greedy alarm among the birds, throwing their fire flight into confusion and sending up a fire of white wings. The seagulls whirl madly in every direction and then with no loss of speed drop from the flight one by one and dive toward the sea. A few seconds later they are together again on the water, a quarrelsome farmyard that we leave behind, nesting in the hollow of the wave, slowly picking through the manna of the scraps.

13. It may be inferred from the passage that the seagulls are following the ship because _____.

A) they are hungry
B) there is a violent storm
C) the crew of the ship is confused
D) they are angry because of the noise coming from the ship
E) the men are playing with them

14. It's implied in the passage that the men probably throw scraps overboard because _____.

A) they like the seagulls
B) they have to get rid of unwanted garbage and leftovers
C) the seagulls annoy them
D) they eat them afterwards
E) the seagulls are hungry

15. According to the passage, the "loud plop at the level of the kitchens" is probably _____.

A) the drop of the engine or anchor to slow the ship down
B) the sound of a fire alarm
C) the sound of a dead bird falling from the sky
D) the sound of leftover food hitting the waves
E) a man falling overboard

16. According to the passage _____.

A) during the voyage on the ship the seagulls followed them by spending no physical exertion
B) seagulls were trying hard to pursue the ship with a great effort
C) seagulls spread a kind of fire to float in the air
D) after throwing bits and pieces of food the writer waited for seagulls to come together
E) seagulls continuously made sounds when they came together

Americans are often regarded as a nation of pet lovers more than any other nation in the world. A recent survey in the United States showed that the average family there spent more money on its pets than on its children. It is possible that Americans are unique in treating their little friends in this way, but what information we do have would suggest that the English, too, are slavish in their attentions to the whims of their pets. This can clearly be seen when we have a look at pet foods, which often contain more vitamins than human food or, at least, are seldom less nutritious. They certainly cost as much. Last year the British public spent two hundred million pounds on pet food alone, to say nothing of veterinary bills and animal furniture. It is difficult not to feel resentful about this when one considers what the same amount could do for victims of starvation and poverty.

17. We may infer from the passage that _____.

A) all families in Europe and in the USA spend more money on their pets than on their children
B) the population of the pets in Britain and the USA is at an alarming level
C) Americans spend more money on the veterinary bills and animal furniture than the British do
D) all people living in the other parts of the world should model the English people for their treatments to the pets
E) some cases in which pet foods are less nutritious than human foods can rarely occur

18. From the passage we learn that last year the British public _____.

A) most probably spent much more money than two hundred million pounds on their pets
B) surpassed the Americans in taking care of their pets
C) got upset when the animals were cut up for medical experiment
D) was unaware of how many people had pets in their houses
E) abandoned their pets just because of the huge cost of them

19. The writer is of the opinion that _____.

A) the British and the American people should be appreciated by the other nations because of their love towards their pets
B) it is unnecessary to criticize the people who spend a lot of money on their pets
C) it would have been much better if the huge amount of money spent on the pets in Britain had been paid out for the poor and hungry people
D) getting rid of the mess that the dogs leave on the street is a difficult problem to overcome
E) animals should be given more priorities than the human beings

20. According to the passage, _____.

A) as well as the American, the British can also be thought as lovers of pets
B) there is no other nation than Americans who admire to have pets in their homes
C) it is impossible not to think about the people living in poor conditions in most parts of the world
D) previous year the British spent much more money on pet foods than any other nation in the West
E) the amount of the bills on pets' health is as much as the one on their meals

The bad news about cancer is that despite the billions spent over the past 300 years searching for a cure, it remains a scourge of the earth. According to the World Health Organisation, close to 10,9 million people around the world developed one form of cancer or another, and about 6,7 million died from it in 2002 (the most recent year for which figures are available) The good news is that, if detected early enough, many forms of this painful condition are highly curable. But what has prevented early detection from achieving greater success is that most of the techniques used to date – such as x-ray or physical examination– tend to be expensive or intrusive, or both. Worse, they often miss the earliest hints of cancer. However, thanks to new molecular diagnostic tools, that looks like changing for the better. Based on "biomarkers", the tests aim to catch cancer in its early stage before it has spread –and when the chance for a cure is high.

21. It's obvious from the passage that _____.

A) doctors have reached their aim by finding a cure for cancer
B) in spite of the large amount of money spent on it cancer is still threatening people as a painful malignancy
C) a number of physicians now believe it's better to watch the cancerogen substance level in the patients
D) the available figures showing the number of death rates from cancer are inaccurate
E) x–ray and physical examination are today available in every cilinic and have so far achieved greater success in early detection

22. We learn from the passage that _____.

A) WHO doesn't know the number of people who have died from cancer in since 2002
B) many forms of cancer are highly curable
C) the early detection techniques such as x-ray or physical examination are promising for future in cancer treatment
D) after 2002 nearly 6-7 million people died from cancer
E) but for new molecular diagnostic tools, things will go right for cancer treatment within a few years

23. It's understood from the passage that "biomarkers" _____.

A) may catch cancer when it has spread to the tissues
B) are only used to catch cancer in blood and urine
C) are the sole technology for monitoring the cancer
D) can do better in cancer care in terms of the early diagnosis in future
E) are thought to be an expensive method used in the identification of the best treatment

24. According to the passage, cancer _____.

A) for which about 7 million died from is changing its shape day by day
B) since the beginning of the 18^{th} century, has been the most dreadful disease the world has ever had
C) is a disease on which a great amount of money is spent, but whose treatment still continues to be a mystery
D) if detected early enough in the body can be cured with the help of the techniques x–ray or physical examination
E) has been examined for over centuries despite the difficulties encountered due to the working conditions of the scientists working on it

The Food and Drug Administration has formulated certain severe restrictions regarding the use of antibiotics, which are used to promote the health and growth of meat animals. Though the different types of medicines mixed with the fodder of the animals kills many microorganisms, it also encourages the appearance of bacterial strains, which are resistant to anti-infective drugs. It has already been observed that penicillin and the tetracyclines are not as effective therapeutically as they once used to be. This resistance to drugs is chiefly caused due to tiny circlets of genes, called plasmids, which are transferable between different species of bacteria. These plasmids are also one of the two kinds of vehicles on which molecular biologists depend on while performing gene transplant experiments. Existing guidelines also forbid the use of plasmids, which bear genes for resistance to antibiotics, in the laboratories. Though congressional debate goes on as to whether these restrictions need to be toughened with reference to scientists in their laboratories, almost no congressional attention is being paid to an ill advised agricultural practice, which produces deleterious effects.

1. In the present passage, the author's primary concern is with _____.

A) the discovery of methods, which eliminate harmful microorganisms without generating drug-resistant bacteria
B) attempting an explanation of the reasons for congressional inaction about the regulation of gene transplant experiments
C) portraying a problematic agricultural practice and its serious genetic consequences
D) the verification of the therapeutic ineffectiveness of anti-infective drugs
E) evaluation of the recently proposed restrictions, which are intended to promote the growth of meat animals

2. As inferred from the above passage, the mutual transfer of plasmids between different bacteria can result in which of the following?

A) Microorganisms, which have an in-built resistance to drugs.
B) Therapeutically useful circlets of genes.
C) Penicillin like anti-infective drugs.
D) Viruses used by molecular biologists.
E) Carriers for performing gene transplant experiments.

3. According to the above passage the author believes that those who favor the stiffening of restrictions on gene transplant research should logically also _____.

A) approve and aid experiments with any plasmids except those, which bear genes for antibiotic resistance
B) inquire regarding the addition of anti-infective drugs to livestock feeds
C) oppose the using of penicillin and tetracyclines in order to kill microorganisms
D) agree to the development of meatier live-stock through the use of antibiotics
E) approve of congressional debate and discussion regarding science and health issues

4. According to the passage, while carrying out gene transfer research molecular biologists rely on _____.

A) antibiotics used to foster the health and growth of meat animals
B) bacterial strains, resistant to anti-infective drugs
C) different species of bacteria which are transferable between one another
D) tiny circlets of genes, called plasmids
E) different types of medicines mixed with the fodder of the animals

No one can avoid being influenced by advertisements. Much as we may pride ourselves on our good taste, we are no longer free to choose the things we want, for advertising exerts a subtle influence on us. In their efforts to persuade us to buy this or that product, advertisers have made a close study of human nature and have classified all our title weaknesses. Advertisers discovered years ago that all of us love to get something for nothing. An advertisement which begins with the magic word-free can rarely go wrong. These days, advertisers not only offer free samples, but free cars, free houses, free trips round the world as well. They devise hundreds of competitions which will enable us to win huge sums of money. Radio and television have made it possible for advertisers to capture the attention of millions of people in this way.

5. The passage is mainly concerned with _____.

A) the ways for us to avoid buying something we see in the advertisements
B) how much ads affect us and what sort of techniques advertisers use to sell their products to us
C) the competitions among the advertisers to exert a strong influence on the people by their ads
D) the classifications of all our title weaknesses
E) the scientific dimensions of advertising

6. As is understood in the passage, the discovery of our love to purchase something without paying money _____.

A) hasn't helped the advertisers so much
B) didn't mean a lot to the manufacturers
C) has just been made by advertisers and has become a turning point in advertising
D) isn't a new thing for advertisers to keep in their minds
E) is rarely known by people today

7. It is made clear in the passage that _____.

A) the competitions held open to the public made it more difficult to persuade people to buy more
B) none of the free stuffs offered to the customer are unreal
C) innumerable competitions help people to win large amounts of money
D) radio or television haven't been used for any purposes to provide opportunities
E) to win huge amounts of money hasn't been so difficult ever

8. According to the passage _____.

A) everyone knows the fact that ads attract our tastes
B) everyone has a taste for anything that cannot be influenced any outer affect
C) nothing that is geared to consumer's attention is rejected
D) everyone around the world is a kind of gourmet for himself in the sense that is rarely impressed by the ads
E) anyone has the taste free from any distraction

A clear answer to whether the languages of the ancient American peoples were made use of for expressing abstract universal concepts can be sought in the case of Nahuatl, which like Greek and German, is a language that allows the formation of extensive compounds. By combining radicals or semantic elements, single compound words can express complex conceptual relations, often of an abstract universal character. The tlamatinime ("those who know") were able to use this rich stock of abstract terms to express the nuances of their thought. They also availed themselves of other forms of expression with metaphorical meaning, some probably original, some derived from Toltec coinages. Of these forms the most characteristic in Nahuatl is the juxtaposition of two words that, because they are synonyms, associated terms, or even contraries, complement each other to evoke one single idea. The juxtaposed terms, used as metaphor, suggest specific or essential traits of the being they refer to, introducing a mode of poetry as an almost habitual form of expression.

9. According to the passage, some abstract universal ideas can be expressed in Nahuatl by _____.

A) putting various meaningful elements together in one word
B) taking away from a word any reference to particular instances
C) turning each word of a phrase into a poetic metaphor
D) giving a word a new and opposite meaning
E) removing a word from its associations with other words

10. It can be inferred solely from the information in the passage that _____.

A) metaphors are always used in Nahuatl to express abstract conceptual relationships
B) there are many languages that, like Greek or German, allow extensive compounding
C) the abstract terms of the Nahuatl language are abitually used in poetry
D) some record or evidence of the tlamatinime exists
E) all abstract universal ideas are ideas of complex relations

11. We learn from the passage that _____.

A) Nahuatl is a language which gives the opportunity to form compounds
B) all the words used in the language are original ones
C) single compound words have nothing to do with combining semantic and radical elements
D) there are numerous languages given as examples in the passage
E) the tlamatinime couldn't use terms to express their thoughts

12. According to the passage, Nahuatl _____.

A) was a language used by ancient Americans like Greek and German
B) was used in order to express worldwide ideas among those who were in ancient American
C) could be used to express the opinions of revealed to the public
D) is the answer sought by the linguists for which if the languages of the early people used for expressing abstract universal concepts
E) in which metaphor was used suggested formation of extensive compounds used in a language

Man is not destined to vanish. He can be killed, but he cannot be destroyed, because his soul is deathless and his spirit is irrepressible. Therefore, though the situation seems dark in the context of the confrontation between the superpowers, the silver lining is provided by amazing phenomenon that the very nations which have spent incalculable resources and energy for the production of deadly weapons are desperately trying to find out how they might never be used. They threaten each other, intimidate each other and go to the brink, but before the total hour arrives, they withdraw from the brink.

13. The main point from the author's view is that ____.

A) man's soul and spirit can not be destroyed by superpowers
B) man's destiny is not fully clear or visible
C) man's soul and spirit are immortal
D) man's safety is assured by the delicate balance of power in terms of nuclear weapons
E) human society will survive despite the serious threat of total annihilation

14. In the author's opinion ____.

A) huge stockpiles of destructive weapons have so far saved mankind from a catastrophe
B) superpowers have at last realized the need for abandoning the production of lethal weapons
C) mankind is heading towards complete destruction
D) nations in possession of huge stockpiles of lethal weapons are trying hard to avoid actual conflict
E) there is a silver lining over the production of deadly weapons

15. We understand from the passage that ____.

A) man's inevitable end is to be slaughtered in all due to having weapons
B) man has produced instruments to kill each other
C) people show appreciated behaviours to each other
D) weapons can be used for the sake of the development of humanity
E) the infinite thing to survive is the human himself not the soul

16. According to the passage, ____.

A) the countries all over the world are on the brink of attacking each other, yet they decide not to do so
B) everything about man can be destroyed but for his works
C) the essence of human being has not been destroyed yet due to the effects it has created
D) countries with extreme strength intimidate one another, but nothing more
E) much as there is a gloomy atmosphere when the situation of the relation among countries, it could be dealt with when humanistic approach is settled.

Visual recognition involves storing and retrieving memories. Neural activity, triggered by the eye, forms an image in the brains memory system that constitutes an internal representation of the viewed object. When an object is encountered again, it is matched with its internal representation and thereby recognized. Controversy surrounds the question of whether recognition is a parallel, one-step process or a serial, step-by-step one. Psychologists of the Gestalt school maintain that objects are recognized as wholes in a parallel procedure: the internal representation is matched with the retinal image in a single operation. Other psychologists have proposed that internal representation features are matched serially with an object's features. Although some experiments show that, as an object become familiar, its internal representation becomes more familiar, its internal representation becomes more holistic and the recognition process correspondingly more parallel, the weight of evidence seems to support the serial hypothesis, at least for objects that are not notably simple and familiar.

17. It can be inferred from the passage that the matching process in visual recognition is _____.

A) not a natural activity
B) not possible when an object is viewed for the very first time
C) not possible if a feature of a familiar object is changed in same way
D) only possible when a retinal image is received in the brain as a unitary whole
E) now fully understood as a combination of the serial and parallel process

18. The author is primarily concerned with _____.

A) explaining how the brain receives images
B) synthesizing hypotheses of visual recognition
C) examining the evidence supporting the serial recognition hypothesis
D) discussing visual recognition and some hypotheses proposed to explain it
E) reporting on recent experiments dealing with memory systems and their relationship to neural activity

19. According to the passage, Gestalt psychologists make which of the following supposition about visual recognition?

A) A retinal image is in exactly the same form as its internal representation.
B) An object is recognized as a whole without any need for analysis into component parts.
C) The matching of an object with its internal representation occurs in more than one step.
D) Storing memories are involved in visual recognition not retrieving.
E) Internal representation properties are never matched serially with an object's features.

20. According to the passage, visual recognition _____.

A) is sometimes initiated by the eye and constitutes an image in the memory system
B) includes the tasks amassing and saving memories
C) is matched with the representation of an object illustrated on a paper
D) has been the idea surrounded by controversy questions aroused by scientists studying on the subject if it works or not
E) is represented by the viewed object in some senses

Geologists of the last century had scant evidence for calculating the age of the earth and its materials, arriving at widely disparate estimates of from 3 million to 500 million years, based on the rate of accumulation of sedimentary deposits. Relying mainly on stratigraphic correlation, using fossils and other kinds of evidence, they succeeded in constructing a relative time scale. But this first attempt at geologic chronology was of little use for comparing the stratigraphy of one continent with another, and without such comparisons the history of the earth remained largely an enigma. Then the discovery of radioactivity changed all this by laying the foundation for radiometric dating. Such dating techniques have since made it possible to calculate the absolute age of a mineral or rock and thereby date the age of the earth as well as events of the remote geologic past with an unprecedented degree of certainty.

21. According to the passage _____.

A) the only way to calculate the age of earth is due to the revelation of radioactivity
B) using only fossils and their variations is the subject of the measuring technique
C) there have been a number of attempts by known geologists to measure the age of the earth
D) last century can be regarded as a period that experinced accurate findings on the age of the earth
E) radiometric dating made it impossible to ignore the geologic history of the earth

22. As stated in the passage _____.

A) there has rarely been strong and determined efforts on how to learn the exact age of the earth throughout history
B) the earliest research carried out to estimate the birth date of the earth was on the basis of sedimentary deposists
C) to a large extent geologists were able to determine the exact age of the earth before it is known to public
D) by working only on fossils, experts managed to determine the length of time that earth exists
E) at least 3 million years ago man existed on the earth with little or no exception

23. As it is pointed out in the passage subsequent dating techniques _____.

A) were largely capable of setting the age of the earth in accordance with the man history
B) were of little use for comparing the continents among one another
C) were novel in comparison with the preceding ones
D) that had evidence for calculating the age of the earth gave the precise information on fossils
E) helped geologists to discuss earth's 500-million-year history

24. According to the passage the earlier attempts _____.

A) were generally based on the rate of accumulation of sedimentary deposits
B) and the later ones went hand in hand to find the history mystery of the earth
C) can still be described as a puzzle waiting to be solved
D) compared to the following ones were a lot to do with the findings of the earth
E) slightly helped the geologists to compare the differences of the continents

Marie Curie is the most famous woman of physics. She has been recognised for her work with Nobel Prize awards in both physics and chemistry. She got a late start with her education obtaining her licence in physics in 1893 and the corresponding degree in mathematics in 1894. In 1903, she finally received her doctorate. Choosing radioactivity as a thesis topic, Madame Curie examined a number of substances and found that thorium and its compounds behaved the same way as uranium. While examining pitchblende, a uranium ore, she discovered radium and polonium. In 1910 she succeeded in isolating pure radium metal. Marie Curie was also instrumental in setting up the Curie laboratory in Paris. She died in 1934 of leukaemia, thought to have been brought on by her extensive exposure to the high levels of radiation involved in her studies.

1. It's mentioned in the passage that Madam Curie _____.

A) received a Nobel Prize for chemistry in the 20th century subsequent to the one for physics
B) was too ordinary a figure in science to create something new
C) was only knowledgeable in chemistry
D) discovered only pure radium
E) did not contribute to the establishing of her laboratory

2. It's implied in the passage that Madam Curie discovered radium _____.

A) when she was dying
B) before she won the Nobel Prize
C) after she set up a laboratory
D) before she started university
E) while preparing her doctoral thesis

3. It's concluded in the passage that _____.

A) Marie Curie did not have any achievements in life
B) Marie Curie's death has been associated with the type of study she was involved in by some people
C) Marie Curie started her radium studies during her education at the college
D) Marie Curie died because of an accident
E) Marie Curie could never get a doctorate

4. According to the passage _____.

A) she died of an illness not known at that time
B) despite having started tardily she succeeded to reach a higher education afterwards
C) she successively got her degree in mathematics and physics
D) she passed away due to having been exposed to a great amount of radiation as a child
E) compared to her contemporaries she obtained her degrees a little before

5. It is clear in the passage that _____.

A) in the beginning of the twentieth century she got the highest rank in the branch she was studying for
B) she found thorium and its compounds and also uranium for the first time
C) she was awarded owing to the successes she did in not only maths but also chemistry
D) authorities awarded her for the accomplishment she had done in two branches
E) she was warned that she might die on account of the effects of radioactivity

According to a study, pilots working on long distance east-west flights maintain their stability by remaining on their home time. If it is noon locally when they arrive in Alaska, but midnight back home in Paris, for example, they draw the curtains and sleep. Abroad, they try to eat the same foods that they would eat at home, minimising the need for adaptation. The risks of rapid adaptation are very high. It can result in costly diplomatic and business errors. Many companies now permit a day of rest for their east–west travellers before they engage in company business. In general, however, things are far worse for hospital doctors, truck drivers, or transport workers on rotating shifts. Yet, none of them would suffer a fraction of their present stress if they were placed on stable shifts. It's better to work and live on a consistent night shift, despite social inconvenience, than to be constantly adjusting.. In a study of doctors on rotating shifts, it became clear that their complaints about insomnia and stomach upsets tapered off when they remained on night duty for more than two weeks.

6. According to the passage, French pilots could sleep at noon in Alaska _____.

A) in order not to change their daily rhythm
B) since they don't wish to stay awake until midnight
C) to feel sleepy when they go out
D) because of their desire for feeling at home in their hotel rooms
E) as they admire to pilots who sleep early

7. As concluded in the passage, in a study of doctors argue _____.

A) doctors suffer more diseases than long distance truck drivers.
B) doctors who have sleep problems have to give up their jobs
C) it might be less stressful to do all-day or all-night work
D) night duty is far more stressful than day-time work
E) doctors have enough time for socialising during the day

8. As is implied in the passage, some companies offer their travelling businessmen a day's rest after a long east-west flight _____.

A) as soon as the businessmen demand permission to rest
B) in order to diminish the risks of quick adaptation
C) so as to allow them to correct their mistakes
D) unless the businessmen don't agree to pay for the costs
E) since the pilots want them to do so

9. Outside their own country, _____.

A) companies let their workers to have one day off
B) the risks of rapid adaptation for businessman are regarded usual
C) pilots don't usually eat different foods to reduce the necessity for adaptation as much as possible
D) any costly diplomatic and business errors may cause unbearable problems
E) doctors complain about insomnia and stomach upsets

10. According to the passage, _____.

A) without fixed working hours, every worker will have to stand stress
B) a number of companies allow a fortnight of rest for their travellers
C) pilots working on long distance stay away from their home for a very long time
D) at noon pilots sleep in dark rooms instead of bright ones
E) things aren't better for hospital doctors than truck drivers, or transport workers

Schools tend merely to teach for the tests rather than taking the time to impart skills that will be useful to pupils in later life. Maths and science are the two subjects suffering the most from a series of problems that afflict education as a whole. Recruting people to teach these subjects is becoming harder. Of all the new Maths graduates last year, just 350 went into teaching. One of the main reasons why Maths and Science graduates are in short supply is the increasing demand for their skills; good Maths graduates are snapped up by, for instance, financial services firms. Therefore, whereas most new History teachers have good degrees, most Maths teachers have bad ones. That creates a vicious circle; subjects badly taught now will produce fewer teachers in the future. An obvious long-term solution is to pay more to teachers in hard-to fill posts such as Maths and Physics. That would breach the taboo that all subjects are of equal value.

11. According to the passage, considering Maths and Science education, a current problem at British high schools is that _____.

A) teachers don't equip students properly for the future
B) the authorities refuse to make the curriculum easier
C) a much smaller number of students want to take tests
D) fewer and fewer students make important discoveries
E) the government pays too much to the teachers

12. It may be inferred from the passage that it's become hard to find good Maths and Science teachers because _____.

A) most of the teachers have grown old
B) schools employ history graduates to teach all the other lessons
C) very few students graduate from Maths and Science departments
D) they all prefer history department
E) successful graduates do not choose to be teachers

13. According to the writer, a wise step to take at British high schools in the long term is _____.

A) employing academic staff at high schools to benefit from their knowledge
B) paying more money to those teachers who teach difficult subjects
C) asking Maths students to teach part-time at high schools
D) evaluating all the teachers equally regardless of their subjects
E) asking teaching unions to solve the problems in British education

14. According to the passage; the situation that cannot be escaped from is _____.

A) schools are only inclined to teach for the tests other than useful subjects for the students in later life
B) while most Maths teachers have bad degrees, most new History teachers have good ones.
C) there are problematic subjects, like Science, that distress education as a whole
D) the taboo that should be broken through
E) the less the teachers are paid, the more they work eagerly

15. One of the principal causes of the shortage in the supply of Maths and Science graduates is _____.

A) the growing necessity for their abilities
B) good Maths graduates are purchased by financial services companies
C) academic departments tend just to teach for the theoretical more than practical skills which would be applicable in later life
D) the thought which all subjects are of equal value
E) arts subjects are those that are free from any kind of problems that afflict education

Many small cultural groups live in places far away from modern cities. Some of these tribes have never had any communication outside of their small geographical areas. When they do contact the outside world, their lives usually change. Learning how to change without losing the best of their own cultures is a problem for them. How can primitive cultures learn to live in a technological world? How can they do this without becoming lost? A group of people is trying to help tribes to learn to communicate with the rest of the world. The people are anthropologists, scientists who study cultures. They want to help small, separate societies live successfully within the larger society. Cultural Survival Inc. wants to help these groups keep the idea of who they are. It wants to teach them how to live in the modern world.

16. According to the passage _____.

A) the people studying cultures want to help small tribal groups live successfully within the larger society
B) small societies are too ignorant to learn new things
C) old religious buildings got lost in small groups
D) an anthropologist is a person who can find answers to problems
E) foreign people can destroy natural resources

In comparison to many countries, the United States is a relatively new country. A very short time has passed since the establishment of the first colony by the pilgrims in 1620. As people kept moving west and settling new lands, the way of living that we call pioneer life continued up through the early 1900s. The era of the American Cowboy still continues in many areas, although it is more mechanized and less primitive. Even at this time many of the American Indians continue to follow their traditional ways in the west, nortwest, and southwest sections of the country. Many Hollywood motion-pictures and books written by the most famous authors of the world literature provide a great deal of knowledge on these three American patterns.

21. According to the passage, it wasn't until 1620 that _____.

A) Hollywood started to make motion pictures
B) Cowboys conquered most of the land
C) the pioneers set up a colony in the United States
D) people moved west to settle new lands

A) the United States is now a more mechanized and less primitive country
B) American cowboy lifestyle has totally ended up in the USA
C) pioneer life continued up in the late 1900s
D) most of the countries in the world are older than the United States
E) traditional ways are followed only by American Indians in the west

23. The passage is concerned with _____.

A) the problems of settling on a new land
B) the ability to cope with the nature in the United States
C) American people's looking down upon American Indians
D) how the first colony settled in America
E) pioneer life in America and its implications today

24. Although there are differences and it is more complex than the past examples, _____.

A) the newly founded country makes up for the lacks
B) many Hollywood motion-pictures and books meet a great deal of knowledge demand
C) many of the American Indians continue to follow their traditional ways
D) people kept migrating to the west
E) the American Cowboy period still continues in a number of areas

25. As stated in the passage three American patterns that the most well-known writers of literature dealt a great deal are _____.

A) the newly founded U.S., first colonies coming to the continent and the pilgrims
B) people's moving west, settling new lands, and the way their living
C) pioneer life, the beginning of the twentieth century

Crimes, systems of justice vary from country to country but the greatest variation between them is in the methods of punishment that they use. For example, a person convicted of, say, theft in some parts of the Middle East will face a severe penalty, such as cutting off his hand, whereas the same crime will receive a relatively reasonable punishment in, say, Scandinavia. Denmark provides also a good example of the more reasonable approach to crime and punishment. About half the people sent to prison there go to what is called an "open prison." In these prisons the prisoners are allowed to wear their own clothes, provide their own furniture, and have their own radios or televisions in the cell.

1. According to the passage, ______.

A) there is a difference between the countries in the way they punish the criminals
B) the methods of punishment mostly depend on how the crime is committed
C) reactions of the most criminals to the methods of punishment are quite severe
D) although each prisoner is given a right to defend himself, they are still punished severely in most of the world
E) a person convicted of theft doesn't have much chance to save his arm

2. It is stated in the passage that if a person is found guilty in court because of stealing ______.

A) he will provide a good example of a very serious offence
B) he will be punished harshly in some countries in the Middle East
C) he will be sent to an open prison which is widespread in Denmark
D) he can be quite sure that he will have a fair trial In Scandinavia
E) he is mostly sentenced to death in Scandinavia

3. The author points out in the passage that in Denmark ______.

A) the prisoners provide a good approach to crime
B) about half of the criminals are sent to prisons
C) the prisoners are never locked in the cells
D) open prisons provide the prisoners with more freedom
E) prisoners are sent to a prison which is called an "open prison"

4. It's implied in the passage that ______.

A) theft is the most common crime in the Middle East

Dulcimers are musical instruments that basically consist of wooden boxes with strings stretched over them. In one form or another, they have been around since ancient times, probably originating with the Persian santir and heart shaped instrument. Today there are two varieties: the hammered dulcimer and the Appalachian, or mountain dulcimer. The former is shaped like a trapezoid, has two or more strings, and is played with wooden mallets. The Appalachian dulcimer is classified by musicologists as a box zither. It's a descendant of the Pennsylvania Dutch scheitholt and the French epinette. Appalachian dulcimers are painstakingly fashioned by artisans in the mountains of West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Virginia. Most performers play the instruments while seated with the instruments in their laps, but others wear them around their necks. Originally used to play dance music, Appalachian dulcimers were popularized by performers such as John Jacob Niles and Jean Ritchie during the folk music revival of the 1960s.

One branch of linguistics, the science concerned with human language, is phonetics. Linguists working in this field investigate the manner in which sounds are produced, received and transcribed. There are many kinds of sounds or phonemes as they are known technically. They can be articulated at any point between the vocal cords and the lips and, depending on the position, will be either vowels, consonants or semi-vowels. The study of how these phonemes are represented in writing is a very complex area, since no alphabet is perfect. Perfection would only be potentially attainable if each sound were represented by a single and constant letter, with no letter representing more than one sound. Spanish, German and Italian are all reasonably phonetic, but living speech hardly ever conforms to the written word. All alphabets lack symbols for some sounds, while also containing some redundant letters.

21. As is stated in the passage, phonemes are _____.

A) animal sounds such as the roar of a lion or barking of a dog
B) the letters used to record language
C) the movements made by the vocal cords
D) the vowels in any given language
E) the sounds made when speaking a language

22. According to the passage, a language could be phonetically perfect if _____.

A) each sound in a language corresponded to one letter
B) all sounds could be represented by combinations of letters
C) it had more letters to represent sounds
D) it had fewer sounds
E) the sounds were only of Italian origin

23. As concluded in the passage, one of the main problems with recording speech is that _____.

A) many sounds are completely impossible to write
B) it changes too often for written language to follow
C) it has too many variations
D) daily speech is always consistent with the written one
E) it rarely corresponds to written language

24. We may infer from the passage that _____.

A) all alphabets include unnecessary letters and don't have symbols for some sounds
B) phonetics is a very difficult area
C) there are a few perfect alphabets
D) perfection is unattainable when each sound is represented by a single and constant letter
E) living speech is entirely in accordance with the written word in Spanish, German and Italian

25. According to the passage _____.

A) linguists are the group of people who examine how people use the language
B) there are a variety of languages spoken all over the world
C) phonetics is the study which investigates the spoken language by using vowels, consonants and semi-vowels
D) the difficulty in writing phonemes is caused by the lack of the alphabets used
E) a complex area that alphabets can not achieve properly is the daily expressions

Oysters are found throughout the world and usually form large beds, which extend in warm waters from the tidal zone to a depth of up to 100ft. Beds of American bluepoint oysters are found along the eastern coast of the continent. Chesapeake Bay is the largest oyster producing body of water in the world, although many of its oyster beds have been depleted through overfishing or pollution. Large beds of edible oysters also exist in Japan and Australia. The native American Olympia oyster, which is much smaller and has a thinner shell than other edible species, is found on the west coast of North America. The culture of oysters is practised in many countries. Young oysters, called seed oysters, are placed on suitable bottoms provided with artificial collectors, such as tile or shells. The most elaborate system of oyster cultivation is practised in Japan, France, and the Netherlands.

1. Acccording to the passage, oysters are most likely found in _____.

A) deep waters, regardless of water temperature
B) deep waters which are warm
C) shallow waters that are warm
D) shallow waters which are cold
E) the regions away from water

2. As is mentioned in the passage, the Olmypia oyster _____.

A) is found only in Northern and Southern America
B) is under threat and close to extinction
C) was discovered long time ago
D) has the thinnest shell of all the edible species
E) is inedible and has a thin shell

3. As concluded in the passage, the culture of oysters _____.

A) involves placing seed oysters on the sea bed
B) is restricted to only a few countries in the world
C) is simpler in the East than it is in Europe
D) requires laying seed oysters on suitable bottoms
E) is only practised in Japan

4. As mentioned in the passage, oysters _____.

A) can be found in all the continental zones around the world
B) create large areas at the bottom of the seas that stretch out in warmer waters
C) are merely found along the eastern coast America
D) have been exhausted due to overfishing and pollution
E) countries like Japan, France, and the Netherlands spend less than any other country on oyster cultivation

5. It is clear from the passage that _____.

A) despite the contamination of the seas, oyster species haven't got damaged so far
B) oysters can usually be found anywhere which in the oceans of the world
C) colder and warmer depths of the oceans are likely to be the homes to oysters
D) the only destination where oysters aren't found along the coasts of America is the western coast
E) although oyster cultivation is done in lots of countries, a detailed one is mainly performed in only three countries

The environmental consequences of energy production have led many nations in the world to impose stricter guidelines on the production and consumption of energy. Further, the search for new and more efficient sources of energy has accelerated. One of these is solar energy. The earth receives huge amounts of energy everyday from the sun, but the problem has been harnessing this energy so that it is available at the appropriate time and in the appropriate form. For example, solar energy is received only during the daylight hours, but more heat and electricity for lighting are needed at night. Due to recent technological advances in energy storage cells, however, solar energy is expected to become a more viable and competitive source of energy in the 21st century. Another direction of research and experimentation is in the search for alternatives to gasoline. Possibilites include ethanol, an alcohol produced from grain and currently used in the US. Ethanol is less polluting than gasoline and is currently used by a half-million vehicles around the world. Automobiles could even be powered solely on electricity, which if ever practicable, would be far cheaper and environmentally acceptable, especially if derived from solar energy, rather than gasoline.

6. According to the passage, stricter guidelines on the production and consumption of energy have been imposed _____.

A) by relatively few countries
B) as a result of efficiency during the exploitation of fuels
C) since the environmental consequences of energy production have been positive
D) because of the less demand for energy
E) because of the environmental effects on the production of energy.

7. As is stated in the passage, solar heating presents certain problems in that _____.

A) it cannot be easily stored for later use
B) many nations do not agree with its utilization
C) its efficient use has accelerated
D) the earth receives great amounts of solar energy
E) it is rather expensive

8. We may infer from the passage that, man and his environment would benefit most from using _____.

A) gasoline and ethanol
B) electricity and ethanol
C) solar energy and gasoline
D) gasoline and alcohol derived from grain
E) cheaper alcohol

9. It's implied in the passage that when the production and consumption of energy is in question _____.

A) automobile industries powered electric cars which would be environmentally acceptable
B) half a million vehicles started to use ethanol which is less polluting than gasoline
C) another direction of research and experimentation is in the search for alternatives to gasoline
D) plenty of countries in the world enforced laws for the sake of it
E) they tried to produce gasoline from grain that enables them not to pollute the environment

10. One may conclude from the passage that _____.

A) about five hundred thousand vehicles around the world now use gasoline
B) gasoline leads to more contamination than ethanol does
C) in the States ethanol produced from grain is served as a beverage
D) technological progresses in solar energy are anticipated to be the most viable source of energy
E) solar energy is used not only during the daylight hours but at night as well

The education of deaf people has a long history. Some educators preferred to teach sign language, a method of communicating with one's hands, while others emphasized trying to teach deaf people to speak. The first known teacher of the deaf was Pedro Ponce de Leon, a Benedictine monk, who tutored children of the nobility in the 1570s. He had some success in teaching deaf children to speak and write. A former pupil of his indicated that Ponce de Le'on used both a manual alphabet and oral methods. Thirty years later in France, Juan Bonet and Manuel Ramirez worked with a deaf young child. Bonet later wrote and published the first book on teaching the deaf. Bonet taught his pupils a signed alphabet that is very close to the one used today in the United States.

11. The passage is mainly concerned with _____.

A) the history of deaf education
B) the "French" method of educating deaf students
C) the first school for deaf students
D) the written method used in deaf education
E) the enormous progress which has been made up to now in deaf people's education

12. It is obvious from the passage that Pedro Ponce de Le'on _____.

A) was an extremely influential person on noble people
B) was the first known teacher of the deaf
C) used all the methods available in those times to teach the deaf
D) introduced the signed alphabet which is still used in the United States
E) was the son of a monk

13. It is clear from the passage that the principle achievement of Juan Bonet was _____.

A) teaching sign language to the citizens
B) being the first to combine oral and manual methods
C) founding the first American school for the deaf
D) writing the first book on educating the deaf
E) refusing the obsolete methods in deaf people's education

14. We may infer from the passage that _____.

A) monks in general tutored deaf children
B) it is a matter of preference for educators either to teach communicating with hands or to teach how to speak and write
C) teaching sign language is more important than teaching to speak and write
D) the first known teacher was in fact deaf
E) Bonet's book was about the sign alphabet which is very close to today's

15. It is clear from the passage that _____.

A) a hermit was able to teach to speak and write to the aristocrats' children
B) while using hands as well as speaking could be troublesome for the tutors
C) it has always been considered to be to too difficult to teach deaf people a sign language
D) all the tutors have used the same way to teach the deaf in order to communicate with them
E) the only attempts to teach how to write and read to the deaf were in the sixteenth century

In the autumn of 1962 rumours began to mount that nuclear-armed Soviet missiles were being set up in Cuba. In October, US aerial reconnaissance confirmed that middle-range missiles were indeed being installed. After a week of secret consultation with his advisors, on October 22 the president of the USA announced his intention of placing a naval blockade around Cuba to prevent the arrival of more missiles. He demanded that the Soviet Union dismantle and remove the missiles and bombers that had been detected. Communication between Khrushchev and Kennedy was opened through diplomatic channels, and on October 28 Khrushchev acceded to the US demands; Kennedy halted the blockade and gave assurances that the United States would not invade Cuba. The two superpowers agreed to establish a "hot line" between Moscow and Washington, D-C., to facilitate communication in times of crisis. In July 1963, an agreement was reached with the Soviet Union and Great Britain on a nuclear test-ban treaty.

16. We learn from the passage that the Americans were sure there were missiles on Cuba because ______.

A) the rumours that they heard were indisputable
B) the president's advisors had informed him during their meeting
C) they had detected them on board ships
D) their airplanes had taken photographs of them
E) the Soviet spies gave some valuable information

17. According to the passage, the result of the American demands was that ______.

A) the Soviets accepted them
B) Khrushchev turned them down
C) the Americans allowed the Soviets freedom during times of peace
D) the Americans allowed the naval blockade to take place in the Soviet Union
E) Kennedy left presidency

18. As is mentioned in the passage, the superpowers are ______.

A) the Soviet Union and Cuba
B) Cuba and America
C) the Soviet Union and the United States
D) America and Great Britain
E) Moscow and Cuba

19. We may infer from the passage that ______.

A) the consultations between the leaders were very harsh
B) nuclear test ban treaty has been valid from the early 1960's
C) the hot line was insufficient to facilitate the communication
D) if Khrushchev didn't accept the US demands, Kennedy would invade Cuba
E) Cuba was unwilling to a treaty

The Byzantine style had a deep influence on Russian building from the time that settled political societies emerged at the end of the 10^{th} century until the 15^{th}. The chief urban centers such as Kiev and Novgorod had numerous churches designed by architects either trained in or imported from Byzantium. Russian contributions to the style were a much wilder sense of fantasy in layout and elevation and the proliferation of domes of the onion type. Even by the end of the 15^{th} century and beyond, when Italian architects were imported in increasing numbers, the old style was blended with that of the new Renaissance. A much stronger injection of Western influence came with the creation of St. Petersburg in 1703. The principal buildings and palaces of the city were put up at various times throughout the 18^{th} century. At first foreign architects held the field and produced a modified form of Baroque building with an emphasis on long, plain facades which were often colored in this century. Some Russian architects emerged towards the end of the 18^{th} century, but the classical influence remained strong well into the 19^{th} century and was reinforced for a time by the Greek revival style.

21. According to the passage, the early Russian architectural style was _____.

A) more controlled and higher
B) completely without domes
C) restrained by western influences
D) halted totally by some foreign powers
E) rather fantastic with many domes

22. As is mentioned in the passage, with the creation of St. Petersburg _____.

A) the classical Greek style was reintroduced
B) the Byzantine dominance continued
C) a greater use of foreign architects were felt in architecture
D) a distinctly Russian style was developed
E) the effect of foreign influence dwindled

23. As concluded in the passage, in the 18th century, _____.

A) the foreign architects produced a variation on the Baroque style
B) there were dull, uninspired buildings
C) Russians completely put Baroque style away
D) Russians returned to classical influences
E) Western influence disappeared

24. As it is stated in the passage that _____.

A) the Russian style had a big effect on Byzantine architecture
B) a few important Italian architects came and created a new style
C) the 18^{th} century was unimportant from the point of architecture
D) Russian architects had the same importance from the beginning of the 10^{th} century to the 19^{th} century
E) there were abundant buildings in the city centers designed by the architects from Byzantium

25. It's clear from the passage that _____.

A) the creations of the Italian were old style
B) Kiev and Novgorod are the only examples of Byzantine style
C) with the participation of Russian to the style, the domes of the onion type were increased
D) there were a few churches designed by Italian architects
E) Greek revival style had been felt from the 10^{th} century

Erysipelas is a contagious and infectious skin disease, which also affects the subcutaneous tissue. It is characterized by inflammation of the diseased areas, with accompanying redness and swelling. Erysipelas is sometimes epidemic and is often caused by the infection of wounds. Erysipelas is caused by the Group A streptococcus bacterium, and first appears as a red potch raised above the surface of the skin. The most common starting point of the infection is the face. The redness spreads, with older areas fading as the new areas extend. On the face, the redness often assumes a characteristic butterfly shape, covering the cheeks and nose. An arm or leg is also commonly affected, often with obstruction of lymphatic channels. This occurs most frequently in order adults, children, and infants. In newborn infants, erysipelas may develop after infection of the umbilical stump. It also tends to occur in areas where lymphatics have been injured, as after an operation. Untreated erysipelas can extend into deeper tissues, with bacterial invasion of the bloodstream, which can be fatal.

1. According to the passage, the most common cause of erysipelas is _____.

A) the inflammation of the diseased areas
B) the infection of open cuts
C) St Anthony's Fire
D) epidemics
E) over-consumption of alcohol

2. It's clear from the passage that _____.

A) Erysipelas was first recorded in 11th-century France
B) Erysipelas and Group A streptococci are one and the same
C) symptoms of erysipelas often begin on the sufferer's face
D) Erysipelas and St. Anthony's fire are one and the same
E) Erysipelas is caused by the Group B streptococcus bacterium

3. We learn from the passage that erysipelas _____.

A) results in death if left untreated
B) occurs far more frequently in older adults
C) is more commonly found in women than it is in men
D) results from the infection of the umbilical stump in infants
E) gets better soon via drugs

4. According to the passage we can't say that _____.

A) Erysipelas's symptoms are bulges and redness
B) this disease can emerge after an infection or an operation
C) untreated erysipelas can come to a conclusion with death
D) during the infection butterfly shape covers the whole body
E) this disease occurs due to the group A streptococcus bacterium

5. We learn from passage that _____.

A) erysipelas is seen in adults more than children and infants
B) some of the symptoms of the disease are redness in the eyes and swollen cheeks
C) erysipelas can always spread to other people very quickly
D) the disease erysipelas can only infects human skin
E) it is likely to occur on the face of newborns

About fifty years ago, plant physiologists set out to grow roots by themselves in solutions in laboratory flasks. The scientists found that the nutrition of isolated roots was quite simple. They required sugar and the usual minerals and vitamins. However, they did not require organic nitrogen compounds. These roots got along fine on mineral inorganic nitrogen. Roots are capable of making their own proteins and other organic compounds. These activities by roots require energy, of course. The process of respiration uses sugar to make the high energy compound ATP, which drives the biochemical reactions. Respiration also requires oxygen. Highly active roots require a good deal of oxygen. The study of isolated roots has provided an understanding of the relationship between shoots and roots in intact plants. The leaves of the shoots provide the roots with sugar and vitamins, and the roots provide the shoots with water and minerals. In addition, roots can provide the shoots with organic nitrogen compounds. This comes in handy for the growth of buds in the early spring when leaves aren't yet functioning. Once leaves begin photosynthesizing, they produce protein, but only mature leaves can "export" protein to the rest of the plant in the form of amino acids.

6. The main topic of the passage is _____.

A) how plants can be grown without roots
B) what elements are necessary for the growth of plants
C) the relationship between a plant's roots and its shoots
D) what can be learned by growing roots in isolation
E) how the buds grow into plants

7. According to the passage, ATP is _____.

A) a biochemical process
B) the tip of a root
C) a chemical compound
D) a type of plant cell
E) a kind of root

8. As concluded in the passage, in the early spring, the buds of plants _____.

A) "export" protein in the form of amino acids
B) do not require water
C) begin photosynthesizing
D) obtain organic compounds from the roots
E) work in accordance with the leaves successfully

9. According to the passage _____.

A) being in need of nitrogen, the plants in the laboratories used inorganic ones to meet their needs
B) sugar and vitamins were supplied by the plant physiologists in the laboratories
C) half a century ago a group of scientists decided to grow plants without and support of nitrogen compounds
D) all the activities done by the plant are supported with the energy transmitted by the leaves
E) roots are competent in producing inorganic nitrogen

10. As stated in the passage, _____.

A) protein is transported by merely mature leaves to the other parts of the plant
B) photosynthesizing is the process conducted by the roots in order to keep the plant alive
C) the production of proteins end with the beginning of winter
D) undamaged plants were first known with their biochemical reactions
E) nourishment of the plants was thought to be quite difficult

With the rise of the great metropolis in the industrial era, city planning in the United States passed out of the hands of the architect and into the hands of the technical expert. Unlike the architect, who thought of the city as a work of art to be built up with an eye towards beauty, the modern technocrat has always taken a purely functional approach to city planning, - the city exists for the sole purpose of serving the needs of its inhabitants. Its outward appearance has no important value over the span of a few centuries; this new breed of urban planner has succeeded in changing the face of American cities. The typical urban landscape is arranged along the lines of the tedious chessboard pattern, with its four-cornered intersections and long, straight, and dull streets. Strict building codes have resulted in an overabundance of unsightly neighbourhoods in which there is only slight variation among structures. Rows of squat concrete apartment houses and files of gigantic steel and glass skyscrapers have almost completely replaced older, personal buildings. Moreover, the lovely natural surroundings of many cities are no longer a part of the urban landscape.

11. The primary purpose of this passage can be to _____.

A) communicate the writer's preference for architects over technocrats
B) show the accomplishments of the modern technical expert
C) point out the failures of old-fashioned architects
D) argue for the preservation of natural surroundings
E) imply that architects are unconcerned about human comfort

12. We may infer from the passage that the author sees modern architecture as _____.

A) necessary
B) lovely
C) valuable
D) impersonal
E) entertaining

13. According to the passage, a consequence of strict building codes is _____.

A) a return of the old-time architect
B) an ugly regularity of building styles
C) more neighbourhoods than are necessary
D) a lack of interested building observers
E) a functional and nice place of dwelling

14. According to the passage a technical expert _____.

A) evaluates city planning from the point of practical approach
B) used his hands in order to change his architecture talents into technical ones
C) thinks of a city as a work of art to be built up again with the help of the developing technological devices
D) in the past took a completely practical approach to city planning
E) served the needs of the inhabitants of the city he lived in

15. We understand from the passage that functional approach means _____.

A) the outward appearance is more important than its practical purposes
B) cities should have lovely, natural surroundings
C) there should be slight variation among structures
D) the external look of the city is unimportant and the first aim is to make people comfortable
E) the sole purpose is changing the face of American cities

The period of the revolution was a time of contrasts in American fashion. In urban centers, women enjoyed a wide range of expression in the fashions available to them, even though shortages might force a young lady to wear an outfit made from the bright red uniform of her British beau. The patriots, however, tended to scorn fashion as frivolous in time of war. In remote areas, patriotic groups led boycotts of British goods and loomed their own woolen cloth. In selecting clothes, stylish American ladies depended on "fashion babies" foot-high dolls illustrating the latest Paris styles. This infatuation with the fashion trends of the "continent" remained intact well into the 20th century. Indeed even today, New York's fashion industry has not fully escaped the tyranny of French design.

16. The passage is mainly concerned with _____.

A) clothing styles in Revolutionary America
B) clothing shortages of the Revolution
C) a revolution in fashion
D) conflict in the modern fashion industry
E) style of "fashion babies"

17. According to the passage Paris fashion industry _____.

A) has come to the forefront only recently, compared to New York
B) has long exerted a powerful influence on American fashion
C) retains its taste for the excessive shopping
D) is unable to break free from New York's influence
E) was only a weak imitation of its British contemporaries

18. It's implied in the passage that people's attitudes toward fashion in the USA _____.

A) were determined only by geography and climatic conditions
B) were a matter of personal taste
C) might have varied according to political beliefs
D) corresponded to a person's wealth and social standing
E) were rather negative before the revolution

19. According to the passage, _____.

A) the patriots always have the tendency to scorn the fashion
B) the patriots didn't like the French fashion and started to loom their own clothes
C) in remote areas women could afford whatever they wanted to wear
D) the fashion admirance of America continued through the 20th century but it is still under the impression of French fashion
E) after the period of revolution the British fashion highly developed

20. According to the passage, _____.

A) all the levels of the society were affected deeply by the shortages during the war time
B) there was unity in the form of the fashion in America at the time
C) due to being in the time of war, some groups used fashion for the sake of their beliefs
D) some of the dresses women were wearing were made out of the other clothes
E) the women not only in the cities but also in the country were in the habit of enjoying fashion at the same level

One of the most successful communal experiments in the New World was that of the Shakers, a sect that fled from England to New York State in 1774 in order to escape religious bigotry. In America, they adopted the name Shaker, once used derisively by the English to describe the dance they performed when in a state of religious ecstasy. At the movement's peak, in the decade prior to the Civil War, there were 6,000 Shakers in 18 communities throughout the eastern states. Since then, however, the Shakers have almost dwindled away. Today, only two active Shaker communities remain, with a total membership of eighteen; all female. The Shakers are resigned to the death of their sect, as they have never believed that everyone could be persuaded to share their beliefs.

21. According to the passage, the Shaker movement began in _____.

A) the eastern States
B) the New World
C) New York
D) England
E) Europe

22. As is stated in the passage, Shakers immigrated to the New World _____.

A) because they couldn't have afforded their living on their previous land
B) although they were living comfortably and happily in England
C) much as the movement was at its peak in England
D) since they were in a state of religious ecstacy
E) so that they would flee from religious fanaticism

23. It's mentioned in the passage that, at present, the Shakers are represented by _____.

A) 6,000 world wide members
B) 18 active communities
C) two remaining all-female communities
D) two female members
E) certain English religious groups

24. The Shakers submitted their lives to their sect, _____.

A) so they were one of the most prosperous communes in the New World
B) thus they did not have belief in convincing people to share their faiths
C) however, their sect fled from England to New York State in 1774
D) so, to escape religious bigotry, they left their homes
E) however mockingly their name was

25. When the group had its most members _____.

A) there were 6,000 Shakers consisting of one eighteenth of the community
B) they adopted the name Shaker
C) It was ten years before the Civil War
D) they performed a religious dance in a state of ecstasy
E) Shaker communities had only female members

Emma Goldman was an activist, writer and orator who became well known for her advocacy of anarchism in the United States. Anarchists oppose all forms of government and advocate voluntary cooperation between individuals and groups. Goldman was born in Kovno, Russia in 1869. At the age of 17, Emma immigrated to the United States, and found work in Rochester. She attended socialist meetings there. However, the oppressive factory work and a bad marriage made her decide to move. She arrived in New York as an anarchist in 1889. She grew close to Russian anarchist Alexander Berkman. Goldman fought for the right to birth–control, and women's rights. In 1893, Goldman was imprisoned for inciting a riot in New York City. In 1917, Goldman and Berkman were sentenced to two years in prison for obstructing the military draft, and when they were released, they were departed to Russia.

1. The main purpose of the passage is to _____.

A) describe the life and times of Alexander Berkman
B) give a history of early American anarchism
C) give a general account of American activists and writers
D) describe the writings of Emma Goldman
E) relate important facts about the life of Emma Goldman

2. It may be best inferred from the passage that, Goldman _____.

A) began to describe herself as an anarchist by attending gatherings while in Rochester
B) was not on very good terms with Alexander Berkman
C) was politically opposed to all wars
D) should not have been imprisoned in 1893
E) worked for the abolition of slavery

3. According to the passage, Emma Goldman was an activist primarily in the field of _____.

A) animal rights
B) government advocacy
C) oration
D) antigovernment activity
E) factory workers' rights

4. As is stated in the passage, Goldman _____.

A) fought against the right to birth–control and women's rights
B) was confined for provoking a crowd
C) resisted all kinds of authorities and fought for reluctantly cooperation between individuals and groups
D) was an anarchist fighting for Russian government
E) didn't have a happy marriage, but she compensated it with a job satisfaction

5. It is understood from the passage that _____.

A) Goldman was against the military service that was compulsory that time
B) having a variety of skills, she attracted lots of people in accordance with the government's wishes
C) anarchists were the people who were against not only government but also voluntarily formed groups
D) having been released from the prison, Goldman left for Russia

More than 300 languages are spoken from north-east India eastwards to Taiwan and from China southwards to the Malay Peninsula. Two large subfamilies make up the language spoken in this region: the Sinitic, comprising Mandarin, Cantonese, and the other languages of China; and the Tibeto-Burman, the best-known members of which are Tibetan and Burmese. The Tibeto-Burman subfamily, although encompassing a greater number of languages than the Sinitic, and although spoken by a wider variety of ethnic groups, is more difficult to classify and actually covers a smaller population. The Tibetan writing system was developed by Buddhist missionaries from India similar to that used in Indo-Aryan languages. The Burmese Alphabet is Indic in origin and, in its present form, dates back to the 15th century. Most linguists recognize four main Tibeto-Burman branches, divided into about nine groups. The provenance of the many Tibeto-Burman includes Tibet, Nepal, Burma, western China, and Assam State in India.

6. As is mentioned in the passage, Cantonese belongs to _____.

A) the Sinitic subfamily of languages
B) the Tibeto-Burman family of languages
C) Mandarin language family
D) Western language family
E) no language family

7. It's understood from the passage that, Buddhist missionaries _____.

A) used Indo-Aryan languages in daily speech
B) developed the Burmese alphabet in the 15th century
C) traveled from India in the 15th century
D) spoke all kinds of ethnic languages at the time
E) were responsible for the formation of Tibetan writing

8. As is stated in the passage _____.

A) the Sinitic is spoken by a wider variety of ethnic groups than the Tibeto-Burman
B) the Tibeto-Burman is relatively simpler to classify than the Sinitic
C) the Sinitic has more languages than the Tibeto-Burman
D) the Tibeto-Burman covers a smaller population than the Sinitic
E) the Sinitic has some variations in tone

9. We may infer from the passage that _____.

A) Sinitic subfamily includes less number of languages than Tibeto-Burman, for this reason it is easy to classify
B) Tibeto-Burman subfamily includes Mandarin and Cantonese
C) Sinitic is used by a larger variety of ethnic groups
D) The origin of the Burmese Alphabet is Western China
E) Indic linguists built the Tibetan writing system

10. According to the passage the Sinitic _____.

A) when Tibeto-Burman and the Sinitic speaking people compared, the former is less than the latter
B) isn't composed of as many languages as the Tibeto-Burman
C) The Tibeto-Burman and the Sinitic are the two languages constituting all the spoken languages all over the world
D) subfamily, although encompassing a greater number of languages than the Sinitic
E) Tibetan and Burmese are one of the best known languages in the southern hemisphere

At one time in North America, wolves ranged from coast to coast and from Canada to Mexico–the greatest natural range of any mammal except humans. Unfortunately, in industrialized human society, wolves seem to have met their match. Gray wolves began declining in the American West around 1870 as westward-moving settlers depleted the bison, deer, and elk that wolves preyed on. Wolves then turned to the sheep and cattle as their prey. Settlers and government trappers responded with intensive campaigns to wipe out the wolf. Approximately 1,5 million wolves were killed in various bounty–hunting campaigns between 1850 and 1900. As late as 1965, hunters were offered $50 for every wolf they could kill.

11. The main purpose of the passage is to _____.

A) describe the decline of the endangered American wolf population
B) outline several alternatives for reviving the once–large North American wolf population
C) explain why early American settlers had such hatred for wolves
D) describe the reason why wolves were wiped out totally in all American states
E) find a solution for the possible recovery of wolf population in America

12. As it is stated in the passage, with the depletion of their natural food source, wolves began turning for food to _____.

A) human beings
B) each other
C) farm animals
D) plants and shrubs
E) sparrows and pigeons

13. According to the passage, wolves began to vanish largely because of _____.

A) extreme weather conditions
B) other animals assuming their habitats
C) laws against them in the states
D) the Canadian and Mexican governments
E) human intrusion and hunting

14. It is understood from the passage that in the past _____.

A) residents tried to catch wolves in order to stop the ceaseless attacks of the wolves to their homes
B) in the industrialized America continent wolves were the most appearing creatures
C) the number of the wolves constituted were the highest of all the mammals only second to humans in America
D) wolves became extinct because of the settlers' insensibly hunting of the animals which wolves preyed on
E) due to the lack of prey wolves turned to human beings

15. According to the passage, wolves _____.

A) because of a lack in the preys they turned their attention to poultry animals
B) are partly becoming extinct due to the industrialization
C) settlers from the west caused the wolves to become extinct
D) a number of variations of wolves have become extinct throughout centuries
E) usually wolves used to settle coastal towns of America

Pigeons have been taught to recognize human facial expressions, upsetting long-held beliefs that only humans had evolved the sophisticated nervous systems to perform such a feat. In recent experiments at the University of Lowas, eight trained pigeons were shown photographs of people displaying emotions of happiness, anger, surprise, and disgust. The birds learned to distinguish between these expressions. Not only that, but they were also able to correctly identify the same expressions of unfamiliar faces. Their achievement doesn't suggest, of course, that the pigeons had any idea what the human expressions meant. In fact, the ability to recognize facial exppressions of emotion is not necessarily innate even in human babies, but may have to be learned in much the same way pigeons learn. None of this work would come as any surprise to Charles Darwin, who long ago wrote about the continuity of mental development from animals to humans.

16. We may infer from the passage that, pigeons _____.

A) have more sophisticated nervous systems than was once thought
B) can only identify the expressions of people they're familiar with
C) can understand human emotions
D) are able to show the same emotions humans can
E) are the sole kind of animals that can be taught by humans

17. It's implied in the passage that, at birth, human babies _____.

A) have nervous systems capable of recognizing subtle expressions
B) can learn from pigeons
C) are not able to recognize familiar faces
D) may not be able to identify basic emotions through facial expressions
E) congenitally know the facial expressions

18. As concluded in the passage, if Charles Darwin could have seen the result of this experiment with the pigeons, his most probable response would have been one of _____.

A) rejection
B) surprise
C) agreement
D) amusement
E) ridicule

19. As concluded in the passage _____.

A) pigeons cannot recognize the expressions of different faces
B) the talent to identify facial exppressions of emotion is not inborn but similar to pigeons it can be learned
C) long ago Darwin wrote about the sophisticated nervous systems of pigeons
D) this finding indicates that pigeons know the meanings of the expressions that people have
E) for many years the researches has been going on in universities

20. According to the passage _____.

A) there isn't a connection between infants and pigeons in the sense they learn
B) unlike other animals only pigeons, like human beings, can identify the facial expressions
C) the ability of the pigeons is not a learnt skill but an inborn one
D) pigeons are able understand human feelings by looking at any of their faces
E) according to Darwin animals are capable of doing anything people can do

According to recent scientific theory, it is probable that life will develop on planets that have a favorable environment. Since there are about 400 billion stars in our galaxy alone, that means there are a huge number of planets like ours that could sustain life. In the past four decades, humans on Earth have begun to search for these planets. This search is called SETI, the search for Extra-Terrestrial Intelligence, and it has been conducted largely by searching for radio waves emitted from civilizations on other planets. All searches thus far have faced many limitations - they used equipment that lacked sensitivity, they did not search frequently, they covered little of the sky, they could only search for a few types of signals, or in a few directions. Hence, searches for the unknown signals unfortunately turned up nothing.

21. The passage mainly discusses _____.

A) the origin of life on other planets
B) efforts to search for signals from extraterrestrial civilizations
C) the life stories of scientists involved in SETI
D) possible explanations for radio signals of unknown origin
E) how successful SETI was in finding aliens

22. According to the passage, a major limitation of the searches for alien radio signals was _____.

A) tools lacking sensitivity
B) the lack of scientific interest in this topic
C) the limited number of signals that might be extraterrestrial
D) the difficulty of obtaining government funding
E) exaggerated enthusiasm of the team members

23. As concluded in the passage _____.

A) the attempts to set a connection with the Extra-Terrestrial beings proved successful
B) thanks to the inadequate equipment and other limitations, the searches for alien signals couldn't meet the expectations
C) it has just been proved that there is life similar to ours on several planets other than earth
D) the scientists decided to develop a sophisticated antenna to communicate with the aliens
E) the experiments drew the attention of many countries and a SETI fund has been made

24. It is understood from the passage that _____.

A) there are numerous stars in the galaxy and there can be some other planets which maintain life
B) the experiments cost a lot of money so it became impossible to continue
C) limitations to these searches were put by the government
D) it is certain that there is life on other planets because they have appropriate environments
E) the scientists are almost sure that SETI can be successful

25. From the passage it is understood that _____.

A) there are assumptions that a life form is bound to be built on planets having suitable environment
B) radio waves obtained are classified according to the point they are sent
C) limitations retard the studies carried by the scientists working on the subject
D) it is likely to find planets out there which human beings live on E) unlike our own galaxy, living things can found in the outer space

Most volcanoes are found along an imaginary belt, called the Ring of Fire, that encircles the Pacific Ocean. However, volcanic activity takes place in many far-flung regions of the world, such as Hawaii, Iceland, Europe, and even the floor of the earth's oceans. The leading theory as to why volcanic activity, as well as earthquakes, takes place when and where it does is called the theory of plate tectonics recognized worldwide. The theory holds that the outer shell of the earth is divided into many different rigid sections of rock, called plates. These plates are not static. They're in continuous motion over a layer of partly melted rock. While their movement may appear insignificant, at only several inches per year, it is not. Indeed, the collisions between the plates caused by this almost imperceptible movement can have catastrophic consequences.

1. According to the passage, The Ring of Fire is _____.

A) magma coming out of the earth
B) an island in the Pacific Ocean
C) the imaginary line which passes through the seas
D) an imaginary location where the highest concentration of volcanoes is found
E) mostly seen on islands

2. It's understood from the passage that, the theory of plate tectonics is _____.

A) unable to explain European volcanoes
B) better suited to explaining volcanic activity than that of earthquakes
C) universally accepted
D) used to predict earthquake activity
E) not a favourable one

3. We may infer from the passage that _____.

A) most earthquakes may be prevented
B) the movements of the plates are so slow that they do no harm to people
C) the movements of plates may seem to be unimportant
D) almost all catastrophes are caused by earthquakes and volcanoes
E) the plates will eventually stop moving

4. It is implied in the passage that _____.

A) the volcanic activities and explosions are caused by the Ring of Fire
B) today, earthquakes are hundred percent predictable
C) undetectable motions can cause crashes between plates and these can result disasters
D) earthquakes are mostly seen in Hawaii, Iceland and Europe
E) in fact the plates' movements are unimportant because several inches per year can cause no damage

5. According to the passage _____.

A) despite the fact that it is thought to be of no account, the repositioning of plates might bring about disastrous results
B) although it is widely believed that there is an unseen belt involving a series of volcanoes, they do not exist at all
C) the imaginary belt of volcanoes are connected with one another at some points of the earth
D) although there is a close connection between volcanic activities and earthquakes, this reality is taken for granted
E) it is clearly known that there are plates that constitutes the inner part of the earth

Scientists identified a period in dinosaur evolution known as the Sauropod hiatus after studying the hundreds of footprints at Clayton Lake. Sauropods are classified as "lizard-hipped" dinosaurs. They are quadrupedal, herbivorous animals with a simple body. Numerous Sauropod footprints from the Early Cretaceous period 100 million years ago and earlier exist in Texas, Oklahoma, and Arkansas- but, at Clayton Lake, footprints from the same time period clearly show that no Sauropods were present, and that Orthiniscans predominated. From the fossil record, it seems that the Sauropods disappeared in many parts of North America between 70 million and 100 million years ago.

6. The passage is mainly concerned with _____.

A) the fossil record of dinosaurs in South America
B) Geologists' method of searching for fossils at Clayton Lake
C) the physical attributes of the Sauropods and the Orthiniscans
D) the Sauropod hiatus, and the evidence supporting it
E) a region which ancient animals lived in

7. According to the passage, Clayton Lake is home to _____.

A) many kinds of lizard-hipped Orthiniscan dinosaurs
B) only a few fossils
C) pottery remains
D) tropical creatures
E) fossilized footprints of several dinosaurs

8. One may conclude from the passage that, the Sauropod disappeared from North America _____.

A) in the 70th century B.C.
B) over the course of about 30 million years
C) 200 million years ago
D) together with the Orthiniscans
E) in the Cretaceous period

9. As it is mentioned in the passage that _____.

A) scientists found bone samples at Clayton Lake
B) there weren't enough footprints for keeping up the researches
C) the researches have been going on all around the world
D) Sauropods are dinosaurs which have four legs and feed on herbs
E) the dinosaur evolution has been an unexplained subject, the researches are very inadequate

10. We understand from the passage that _____.

A) Sauropod hiatus is the name of the dinosaur evolution
B) the dinosaur evolution started in Texas, Oklahoma, and Arkansas
C) 100 million years ago, at Clayton Lake, Orthiniscans were rarely widespread
D) Sauropods had very complex body forms
E) when the researches started, the footprints were insufficient

The human liver is composed of the right lobe (the largest), the left lobe, and two small lobes that are located behind the right lobe. Each lobe is composed of small, multi-sided units called lobules. Most livers have between 50,000 and 100,000 lobules. The essential work in each lobule is performed by a bundle of liver cells that surround the central vein found in each lobule. These bundles, often called sheets, are separated by cavities known as sinusoids. It is the presence of these sinusoids that account for the liver's somewhat spongy texture and its ability to absorb large amounts of blood.

11. According to the passage, lobules _____.

A) have at least 50,000 lobes
B) perform the least important job in a liver
C) are placed in the lobes
D) cannot function in the human liver
E) are carried by means of tubes

12. It's pointed out in the passage that _____.

A) liver cells are found in the central vein
B) the human liver is composed of four lobes
C) all lobes are situated on the left part of the liver
D) the most important work within a liver is done by the veins
E) the human liver is the largest organ in our bodies

13. One may infer from the passage that without the sinusoids, the liver would _____.

A) include many more bundles
B) increase the flow of blood in to itself
C) absorb even more blood
D) be able to help the other organs function properly
E) not be able to soak up so much blood

14. It is stated in the passage that _____.

A) we can't know the approximate number of lobules in each liver
B) the lobules are single sided and their shapes are variable
C) the human liver has a very complicated form because each lobe is composed of numerous sinusoids
D) a group of liver cells that encircle the central vein do the fundamental work in each lobule
E) every liver has the same number of lobules

15. We may infer from the passage that _____.

A) if the number of the lobules is low then the liver loses its feature of spongy texture
B) sinusoids are holes which are called sheets
C) the numbers of the lobules in livers can vary between 50000 and 100000
D) the right lobe is the largest one because there are numerous sinusoids in it
E) the reason why the right lobe is bigger than the left lobe is unknown

Many problems of interest to scientists involve converting data into useful information by solving mathematical equations. The first computers were used in solving scientific problems because of their capacity to do arithmetic at great speeds. For example, one of the first problems computers solved, in the late 1940s, was where a shell shot from a cannon would land if it were fired with a certain force and in a certain direction, given a certain wind velocity, and so on. What were the data? The data here might include the design and weight of each shell, the amount of powder used to propel it, and the design of the bore of the cannon. We could use a manual or a mechanical system to solve the equations that needed solving-but the work would take so long that the shell would long since have reached its target.

16. As is stated in the passage, in general, mathematical equations help us turn data into _____.

A) scientific problems
B) arithmetic and maths
C) practical knowledge
D) facts
E) computer resources

17. According to the passage, mathematical problems like those that can tell where a shell shot from a cannon might land _____.

A) can be quickly solved by humans
B) are no longer of any use
C) aren't worth even solving
D) are regarded as nonsense equations by the scientists
E) require computers to provide solutions

18. As is concluded in the passage, computers _____.

A) are smarter than human beings
B) are quicker than manual or mechanical systems in solving a complex problem
C) can be relatively inexpensive in some countries
D) are important in determining the necessary data
E) must be used only in scientific field

19. According to the passage _____.

A) scientists would convert data into useful information by using computers to have broad vision on the aspects they were studying
B) there was a debate about how far a shell travels when fired from a cannon
C) although the capacity of the early computers could do limited processes, they were in solving scientific problems
D) in the second half of the twentieth century, the first problems were solved through computers
E) the great speeds that computers reached affected the scientists to solve problems they couldn't do immediately

20. According to the passage _____.

A) in the first half of the twentieth century, data on where a shell shot from a cannon would land had already been known
B) direction, wind velocity, and other datum were calculated with the help of the advanced computers easily
C) computers were only used to process the calculations on how a cannon works
D) the design and weight of shells were calculated detailed to be used in case of wars
E) due to their abilities in arithmetic at great speeds the early computers were used in scientific problems

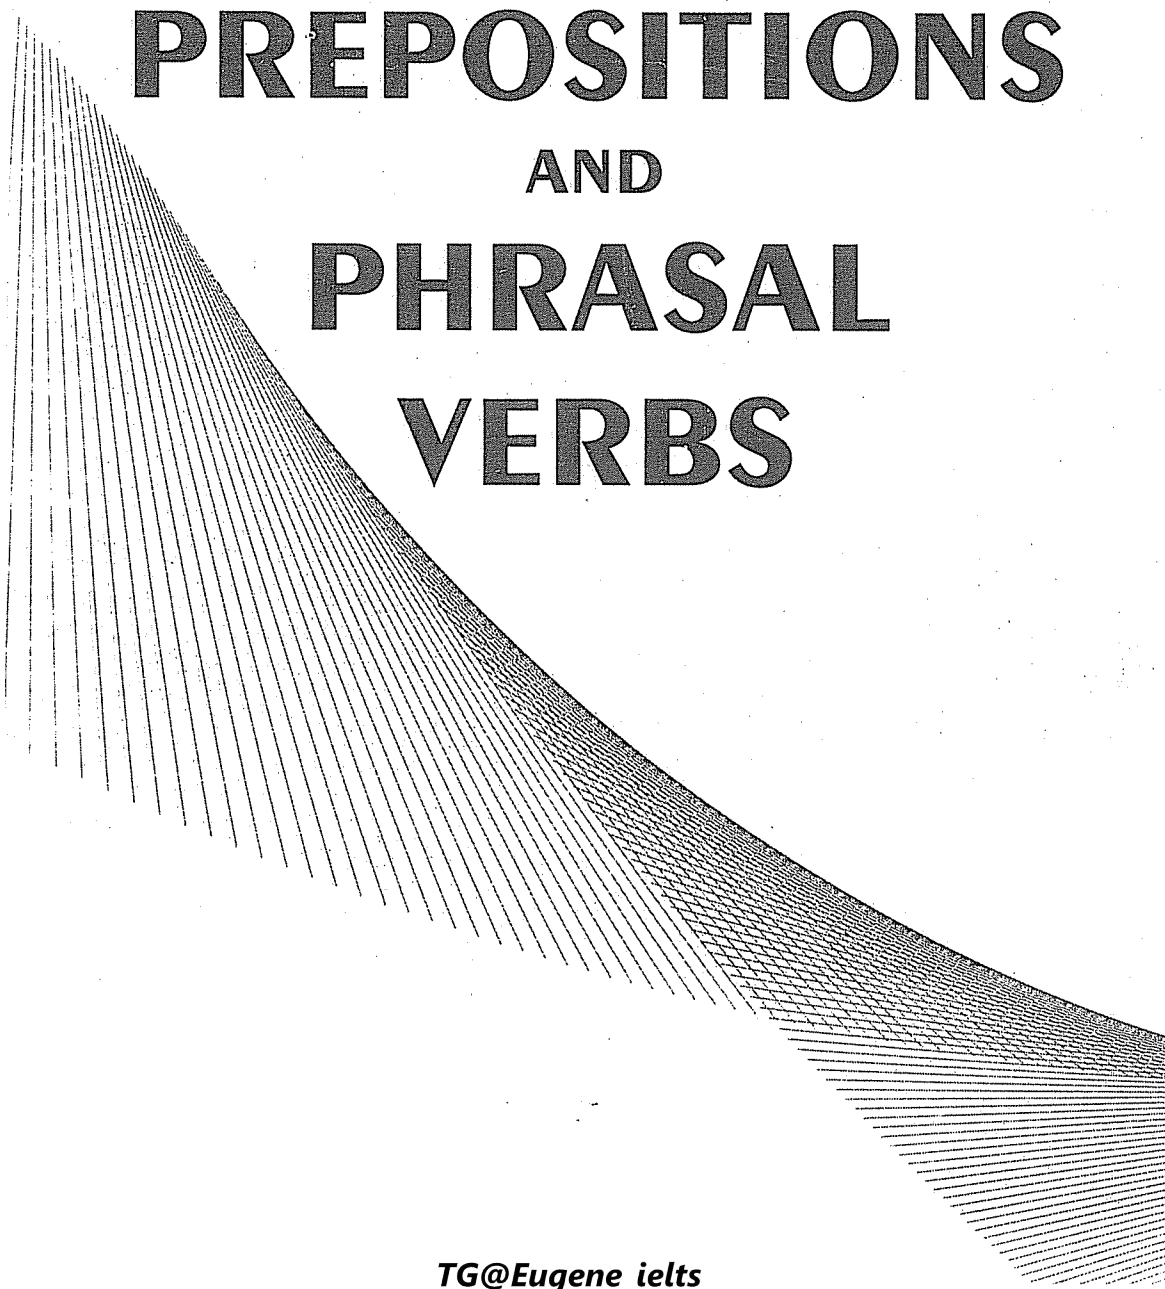
Tao can be roughly translated into English as path, or the way. It is basically indefinable. It has to be experienced. It refers to a power which envelops, surrounds and flows through all things, living and non-living. The Tao regulates natural processes and nourishes balance in the universe. It embodies the harmony of opposites. The founder of Taoism is believed by many to be Lao-Tse, a contemporary of Confucius. He was searching for a way that would avoid the constant feudal warfare and other conflicts that disrupted society during his lifetime. The result was his book: Tao-te-Ching. Others believe that he is a mythical character. Taoism started as a combination of psychology and philosophy but evolved into a religious faith in 440 AD when it was adopted as a state religion. At that time Lao-Tse became popularly venerated as a deity. Taoism, along with Buddhism and Confucianism, became one of the three great religions of China. With the end of the Ch'ing Dynasty in 1911, state support for Taoism ended. Much of the Taoist heritage was destroyed during the next period of warlordism. After the Communist victory in 1949, religious freedom was severely restricted. The new government put monks to manual labour, confiscated temples, and plundered treasures.

21. As is stated in the passage the Tao adjusts _____.

A) aspects of the universe whose most traditional view is believed to be mythical
B) the evolution theories in the world which were initiated as a state religion in 440 AD
C) the regulations that at that time the gods were thought to have
D) both the definitions that were generally been regarded as true and their usage
E) not only the inborn course but also the environment in which man lives

22. It is clearly stated in the passage that one of the subjects under debate is ____.

A) the establisher of the doctrine is whether a real person or not
B) Tao himself taught the religion to the others around him
C) which one of the three religions is widespread throughout China
D) the meaning of the word "Tao" could clearly be understood by the public
E) some political parties could yield with the help of the religion

23. According to the passage Lao-Tse ____.


A) is a kind of monk who stands up for the idea of the harmony of opposites
B) fought against the disturbed society all his life
C) was always looking for a way to struggle against wars
D) is someone that nothing is clearly known about
E) knew that a combination of psychology and philosophy would heal the society

24. It is clear from the passage that _____.

A) several million monks were reduced to fewer than 50,000 by 1950s
B) during the cultural revolution in China much of the remaining of Taoist heritage was destroyed
C) some religious tolerance has been restored under the king
D) in the early 20^{th} century, the change in the rulers contributed to the decline of the religion
E) religion suffered mostly in the early times of its own from the newly selected governments ruling China
